Mussolini Preparing To Renew His Peace Proposals

Duce Said To Be About To Suggest Armistice in New Plea to 4 Nations

Confers with British Ambassador and Informed Sources Express Optimism over Plans To End War

Rome, Sept. 6. (AP)—Private Italian sources said tonight Premier Mussolini was about to renew his proposal for a conference of powers with a suggestion for an armistice in the German-Polish-British-French war until a conference could take place.

Official confirmation of this report was lacking, but one high-placed Fascist said he thought it "most logical" and that Italy's neutrality was meant to leave Mussolini free to act as mediator if possible.

Private sources made known their belief after Sir Percy Loraine, British ambassador to Rome, had held a conference with Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Informed sources believed Sir Percy sought some indication of Italy's attitude toward the European war. But what Count Ciano told Sir Percy regarding the possibility of Italy's entry into the struggle or her continued neutrality was not disclosed.

Allies May Reject Plan

In foreign circles, however, any new conference plan put forth by Mussolini was expected to run into the British-French objections which wrecked his proposals at the eve of hostilities.

These objections were that Germany must withdraw her armies from Polish soil and break off hostile activities.

Adolf Hitler refused to withdraw his troops and the conference proposed for September 5 fell through. Some Italian quarters thought Hitler might soon be willing to negotiate with Britain and France since his occupation of a large part of Poland is accomplished, and especially since the corridor, Silesia and Danzig—his chief avowed objectives—are his now.

One Fascist official said he could not believe Britain and France would want to prolong the war "once the Polish question has been definitely settled."

Press Sees Early Peace

This view was shared by the Italian press. Some papers speculated on the possibility of the war being over in a few weeks.

This view, however, did not appear to be shared here in British and French quarters. There the feeling was that the war on Nazi Germany would be pursued to the end.

New Salary Range for Teachers and Safety Rules for Youngsters

Baltimore, Sept. 6. (AP)—Maryland youngsters turned their faces toward school this week protected by a series of new laws enacted by the last legislature at the request of Parent-Teacher Associations and the State Education Department.

Measures to improve the school system included higher minimum salary scales for teachers, improvements in school bus safety and provisions for a thorough study of the school system.

New Salary Range

The new salary range is from $1,200 to $1,800 a year for all teachers with college degrees, regardless of whether they teach in high or elementary schools. The old range was from $950 to $1,150 for elementary teachers and from $1,150 to $1,350 for high school instructors. School officials estimated the new scale would give teachers an average raise of $60 per year this year. The new scale is effective October 1.

The new law provides that motorists "meeting or overtaking" school bus which has stopped "to take on or let off children" must also stop until the bus begins to move. The law does not apply to traffic on dual highways, however. A fine of from $5 to $50 is (Continued on Page Two)

U. S. Destroyers Patrol American Side of Atlantic

Seek to Detect Presence of Belligerent Warships

BY RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 6. (AP)—Two American destroyers and two coast guard cutters, first to sea of a vast patrol fleet, cruised the North Atlantic tonight alert to detect and report the presence of belligerent warships.

Meanwhile, 116 more destroyers and other coast guard craft awaited repairs fitting out or the provision of crews before deploying into a patrol running several hundred miles to sea and extending from east of New England to the Antilles and the Panama canal. Airplanes also will be used.

The patrol, it was announced, is being established at the direction of President Roosevelt. Its purpose is to give the government information of the presence of belligerent craft in waters adjacent to the United States, so that shipping in the vicinity may be warned and the embassies of the belligerents informed that American vessels are in the area in which their fighting ships may be operating.

While this became known, Stephen L. Early, Mr. Roosevelt's press secretary, said the government was keeping a close watch upon the radio, particularly short wave international broadcasting, to see how it behaves at a time when the country is anxiously guarding its neutrality. Officials, he said, were particularly desirous that amateur operators or others should not, intentionally or otherwise, give unneutral aid and comfort to any of the nations now at war.

Where the press and standard broadcasting stations are concerned, Early said, the president certainly wants no censorship, although plans exist for the government to take control of the radio if this country should go to war.

These developments topped a day of numerous events relating to the war and America's connection with that conflict.

Asks Reports on Spies

Attorney General Murphy urged citizens to report any spying activity which comes to their notice to the federal bureau of investigation. Although he said he wanted no "witch hunt," he asserted:

"Foreign agents undertaking espionage, sabotage, and subversive activities will not find this country a happy hunting ground." Orders went out from the marine inspection bureau directing all steamship inspectors to take special precautions against saboteurs who might try to damage vessels leaving American ports. The bureau said it was possible agents working for some of the belligerents might seek to hinder supplies to opposing belligerents.

Secretary Hull said this government was still gathering information on the sinking of the British liner Athenia. Asked if a protest to Germany would follow if American lives were lost in that disaster he said that all he could say was that the government was trying to assemble the actual facts.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of a committee which has been at work for months on plans for assisting refugees to leave Germany, called upon both Hull and the president. Hull said that while the war had complicated that problem it was receiving constant attention and that a meeting of the committee called for October 16 and 17 would be held as scheduled.

He said the submersible presumably was a German craft. Ricau notified all members of the board of trade interested in shipping.

Polish Garrison Holding Danzig Harbor Position

Small Force Defies Powerful Force of German Raiders

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Riga, Latvia, Sept. 6. (AP)—A little garrison of Poles in Danzig harbor continued tonight to hold the Polish munitions depot of Westerplatte, after defying for days the guns of the German navy and the bombs of German planes.

There was no sign of surrender when I left Danzig yesterday. Censorship was complete. The Germans were attempting to bring heavier artillery into play on these Poles, against whom the first shots of the war were fired by the cruiser Schleswig Holstein on Sept. 1 at 4:48 a. m.

Have Only Small Arms

It was believed by Germans in Danzig that not more than a hundred men were on the little peninsula at the entrance to the harbor, with only machine guns and small arms, whereas the cruiser poured shells from big guns upon them at the moment of Danzig's return to the Reich and sent landing parties to storm the garrison.

Then came 24 German bombers, but after hours of bombing Saturday a machine gun tattoo showed the garrison still held. There was more bombing and the Poles sent up taunting red rockets.

Clear Harbor Area

The Germans, fearing the depot eventually would be blown up by its defenders, cleared the harbor area, rehousing thousands.

Meanwhile, the Germans were displaying vexation at the slowness of their efforts to take the nearby Polish port of Gdynia. On my departure from there they were being held several kilometers distant from the city.

The Danzigers appeared none too happy after the enthusiasm shown first upon their return to the Reich. Many lives were lost.

More Ships To Bring Americans to U. S.

Washington, Sept. 6. (AP)—The state department announced tonight that arrangements had been made to place four more ships in the service of bringing back Americans from war torn Europe. The names of the vessels were not disclosed, but the department said they would sail this week for European ports, and would be equipped to transport 3,000 persons on the return voyage.

Zeppelin Factory Reported in Flames

Staple Food Prices Rise Sharply In 3 Large West Virginia Cities

By The Associated Press

Staple food prices rose sharply Wednesday in at least three large West Virginia cities and one Charleston miller concern said it would sell no flour "at any price."

Most merchants expressed the belief that heavier consumer buying was war-inspired.

Although rationing of sugar was reported among Huntington retailers, there apparently was no immediate shortage of any commodities among the Charleston retailers. Parkersburg reported price rises on sugar, coffee, oats and flour, but no rationing.

Harvey G. Davis, Sr., president of the Charleston Milling Company, said that because of the soaring Brunt of the attack was reported at the "Burgundy Gate" and along the Moselle Valley (see arrows), with the French breaking through in a dozen places.

Poles Battle Germans; Tommies Reach France

Warsaw, Sept. 6. (AP)—A battle for Warsaw raged 30 miles north of here today, couriers reported, with the "Poles fighting like lions" and holding back the invaders despite repeated tank-led thrusts.

The Poles were described as holding the invaders on a line between Pultusk, 30 miles directly north of Warsaw, and Flonsk, 35 miles northwest of this city.

It was announced that the Poles had lost Pultusk once in the battle and then retaken it. Pultusk is about 25 miles east of Ciechanow, where the right wing of the last-ditch defenders formerly was pivoted.

German planes raided the north section of Warsaw just before noon, and an official radio announcement said six planes were shot down.

More than a dozen extremely strong explosions were heard from the direction of the railway bridge across the vistula and the east station which was bombed two days ago. One train waiting to carry refugees toward Wilno, in northeast Poland, and Riga, Latvia, was last reported at the station.

A ranking staff officer, slightly wounded, who returned briefly from the scene of battle, said the Polish forces were defending themselves stoutly, holding their lines and doggedly beating off German thrust after German thrust.

British in France

Paris, Sept. 7. (Thursday) (AP)—British troops have landed in France to aid the French army which is now in Germany fighting to crack the German Siegfried line.

Details of the landing of the British Tommies were not disclosed, nor were the numbers involved, but government sources declared the British army would be able to give "infinitely stronger" support to French land forces than it did in 1914.

A terse French communique last night declared the huge French military machine was swinging its northern wing deeper into German territory in the face of growing resistance.

Britain Reports Repulse of First Nazi Air Raiders

Statement Declares Planes Were Easily Driven Away

London, Sept. 6. (AP)—German warplanes attempted their first major foray of the new European war on the British Isles today but the government declared they were driven off by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft fire.

The information ministry declared the Germans did not "penetrate our defenses at any point."

Operations on many of the far-flung war fronts were marked by intensified aerial activity.

London civilians, scurrying for shelter at an hour when buses, surface cars and subways were filled with those bound for work, saw nothing but puffs of smoke from anti-aircraft guns and British pursuit planes streaking overhead.

Washington, Sept. 6. (AP)—Two members of the Dies committee angrily accused each other today of resorting to a "cheap political trick" after one of them asserted that the New Deal was "working hand in glove" with the Communist party.

The clash came at the end of two days of questioning of Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party in the United States.

Representative Thomas (R-N.J.) wanted to know if ten organizations, including the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Student Union and the American League for Peace and Democracy, could be included.

Browder replied, "yes," in each case. Then Thomas observed that Secretary of Interior Ickes, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had addressed recent conventions of some of those organizations.

"It may just be a coincidence," Thomas said. "But it seems more than that to me. It seems to me that the New Deal has been working hand in glove with the Communist party."

Hitler's Forces Near Warsaw and Lublin in Drive To Crush Poles

Invaders Expected to Attack Abandoned Capital within Few Hours and Then Shell New Seat of Polish Government; Britain Blockades Germany; Repulses Air Raid; Bremen Safe

By The Associated Press

Blue-clad French troops were reported fighting on rich German territory last night (Wednesday) while the legions of Adolf Hitler captured Krakow, the "heart of Poland," and rolled on toward Warsaw, the capital abandoned by the Polish government.

A terse communique from the French high command announced its armies were progressing beyond the frontier into the Saarland of Germany in the face of resistance from the Reich's troops.

Army Ahead of Schedule

France's ally—Poland—suffered another reverse when the Germans seized the ancient city of Krakow, sacred to the Poles. Last night, the German army, well ahead of schedule, was reported 18 miles east of Poland's "heart" and directing its operations toward Lublin, the present seat of the Polish government.

With the Germans expected at the gates of Warsaw within a few hours, Poland called on all citizens of the capital to report for work on trenches around the city.

But at Riga, Latvia, a little garrison of Poles in a munitions depot at Westerplatte, in Danzig harbor, was reported still defying the Germans.

Speeding her war with the Reich, Great Britain revealed she had drawn up sweeping measures to disable German economy by blockade, unified her fighting forces, and repulsed the first raid of German bombers.

On the high seas, the British added the Motorship Inn to her list of enemy ships sent to the bottom since war was declared Sunday.

The Inn, en route to Hamburg from Belem, Brazil, was reported sunk in mid-Atlantic but details were lacking.

Bremen Unharmed

The first report on the great German liner Bremen, which had become a "ghost ship" after sailing from New York last week, came from Berlin, where German sources said the vessel had arrived unharmed in an undisclosed neutral harbor.

Still agitated about the sunken Athenia, Great Britain learned from Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, that 125 passengers were unreported. Previously the total missing had been set at 49 on reports of rescuing vessels. The Athenia, her survivors charged, was torpedoed Sunday.

The war in the air was resumed in France when two air raid alarms were sounded but no bombs were dropped and the invading planes quickly disappeared.

In the English-German aerial engagement on England's coast, London civilians saw nothing but puffs of smoke from anti-aircraft guns and British pursuit planes rushing to the battle. The British information ministry declared the Germans did not "penetrate our defense at any point."

Single Unified Army

Seeking better use of her armed forces, Great Britain merged all units of the regular army, territorial army, militia and other auxiliary forces into a single, unified army.

Great Britain clamped a blockade on Germany simultaneously with the declaration of war.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to make his first statement on the war today in Parliament.

Anxious to maintain the United States' declared neutrality, President Roosevelt directed the establishment of a vast patrol fleet to direct and report the presence of ships of the warring powers. Two destroyers and two coast guard cutters already are on patrol in the north Atlantic.

From Basel, Switzerland, came a report that flames, believed caused by an explosion, could be seen at the German Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen, on the Switzerland-German frontier.

Hitler Is Soldier's Model

Praising the forces of the Reich in an order of the day issued to the advancing east army, Col. Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, Chief of Staff of the German Army, held up Hitler as a soldier's "model of personal courage and stout determination." He urged the soldiers to "keep after the enemy and apply all your strength until the final decision."

In far-eastern Shanghai, British and French authorities were requested by the Japanese navy to withdraw their forces from China to "remove the danger of incidents" resulting from the war.

Nazi Lines Stiffen as French Press Drive Between the Rhine and Moselle

BY TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Sept. 6. (AP)—The French army swung its northern wing deeper into German territory tonight in the face of increasing Nazi resistance.

A battle developing along the 100-mile front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers on the extreme northern flank spread slowly across the rough countryside southeast of the Ardennes mountains.

Newly mobilized French reinforcements were moving up toward the frontier behind the line of attacking troops.

From bases far behind the lines French and British planes roared out in coordinated attack against the Saar mining area and industrial towns to the north which form one of the main sources of war supplies for German divisions operating in the Moselle valley.

American Military Experts See Early German Victory in Poland

By E. E. BOMAR

Washington, Sept. 6. (AP)—Germany's powerful and speedy war machine appeared to military men here today to be winning a race in Poland against time and the weather.

As a result of the reported capture of Krakow and the threat to Warsaw six days after the outbreak of hostilities, some qualified strategists foresaw the possibility that a great pincer movement might inflict a major disaster on the Polish armies.

Even if the retreating troops elude the trap, the loss of more than a quarter of the richest area of Poland seemed imminent.

As the experts figured it, the Germans were trying to reach the second line of Polish defense along the Vistula river before the autumn rains and before the French and British pressure in the west became more effective.

In view of the reputed strength of Germany's fortifications—the so-called Siegfried line—military observers minimized the immediate importance of French reports of advances into the German Saarland.

A French communiqué telling of "local advances" they reasoned might mean merely preliminary occupation of a border area between the Siegfried and Maginot lines which are from 6 to 10 miles apart along the French-German frontier.

The speed of the announced German attempts to conquer Poland before turning to the west exceeded the expectations of some authorities who have closely followed developments.

The imperiled Polish troops, it was explained, are west of Warsaw, dependent upon the single Poznan-Kutno-Warsaw railway line for retreat. Junction points and bridges of this line have been bombed repeatedly by the advancing Germans to hinder withdrawal to the Vistula.

The Vistula line itself, extending north and south across Poland, is threatened by flank movements of German forces which have pushed across the Carpathian mountains from Slovakia in the south and from east Prussia to the north.

In the English-German aerial engagement on England's coast, London civilians saw nothing but puffs of smoke from anti-aircraft guns and British pursuit planes rushing to the battle. The British information ministry declared the Germans did not "penetrate our defense at any point."

Single Unified Army
Seeking better use of her armed forces, Great Britain merged all units of the regular army, territorial army, militia and other auxiliary forces into a single, unified army.

Great Britain clamped a blockade on Germany simultaneously with the declaration of war.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to make his first statement on the war today in Parliament.

Anxious to maintain the United States' declared neutrality, President Roosevelt directed the establishment of a vast patrol fleet to direct and report the presence of ships of the warring powers. Two destroyers and two coast guard cutters already are on patrol in the north Atlantic.

From Basel, Switzerland, came a report that flames, believed caused by an explosion, could be seen at the German Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen, on the Switzerland-German frontier.

Hitler Is Soldier's Model
Praising the forces of the Reich in an order of the day issued to the advancing east army, Col. Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, Chief of Staff of the German Army, held up Hitler as a soldier's "model of personal courage and stout determination." He urged the soldiers to "keep after the enemy and apply all your strength until the final decision."

In far-eastern Shanghai, British and French authorities were requested by the Japanese navy to withdraw their forces from China to "remove the danger of incidents" resulting from the war.

Nazi Lines Stiffen as French Press Drive Between the Rhine and Moselle

By TAYLOR HENRY
Paris, Sept. 6. (AP)—The French army swung its northern wing deeper into German territory tonight in the face of increasing Nazi resistance.

A battle developing along the 100-mile front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers on the extreme northern flank spread slowly across the rough countryside southeast of the Ardennes mountains.

Newly mobilized French reinforcements were moving up toward the frontier behind the line of attacking troops.

From bases far behind the lines French and British planes roared out in coordinated attack against the Saar mining area and industrial towns to the north which form one of the main sources of war supplies for German divisions operating in the Moselle valley.

Law Enforcement Agencies To Aid In Hunt for Spies

Local Officials To Be Asked To Assist Federal Officers

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt called upon every police officer in the United States tonight to cooperate with the Federal Bureau of Investigation in a mighty effort to stamp out "espionage, counter espionage, sabotage, subversive activities and violations of the neutrality laws."

Formally placing the FBI—the famous G-men—in charge of this campaign, he requested "all police officers, sheriffs, and all other law enforcement officers in the United States" to turn over to the nearest FBI agent any information obtained on the offenses in question.

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt directed Attorney General Murphy today to call upon local law enforcement agencies to aid in tracking down cases of espionage, sabotage and violations of the neutrality laws.

The chief executive asked that the local enforcement officers co-operate with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a justice department division, to co-ordinate this work.

Earlier, Murphy issued a statement asking the public to co-operate with the FBI on espionage cases.

The text of the president's statement follows:

"The attorney general has been requested by me to instruct the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice to take charge of investigating work in matters relating to espionage, sabotage and violations of the neutrality laws.

"This task must be conducted in a comprehensive and effective manner on a national basis, and all information must be carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion and irresponsibility.

"To this end I request all police officers, sheriffs, and all other law enforcement officers in the United States promptly to turn over to the nearest representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation any information obtained by them relating to espionage, counter espionage, sabotage, subversive activities and violations of the neutrality laws."

Murphy said that "foreign agents undertaking espionage, sabotage and subversive activities will not find this country a happy hunting ground for their work."

He suggested that information concerning spies be supplied to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"There will be no repetition of the confusion and laxity of 20 years ago which caused havoc," the attorney general declared.

"At the same time, we do not want to turn our activity into a witch hunt," Murphy said a great number of new FBI offices had been opened "throughout the land."

No Bus Fatalities
School officials said that no child has been killed or seriously injured on a bus while enroute to or from school in the 12 years since the school bus system was established. However, some have been killed while crossing the road after leaving buses.

The law also provides that school buses must not exceed 35 miles per hour, must be inspected twice yearly, and must be equipped with fire extinguishers and safety doors in the back. They must also stop at all railroad crossings.

School executives said the mandatory stop for school buses would not greatly interfere with the flow of traffic because the buses are on the road only about an hour in the morning and an hour in the afternoon on 185 days per year.

Motorists Warned

The bus law, which was sponsored by John Kreuzen of Salisbury, safety chairman for the Maryland Congress of Parent-Teacher Association, has a companion measure which provides for signs to be erected at a state line warning out-of-state motorists of the "stop" provision. The provision for a school survey was introduced by Majority Floor Leader John S. White. It calls for a study of both elementary and high schools as well as the state teachers colleges. The survey committee has not been appointed.

ITALY--MYSTERY KEY IN EUROPE'S WAR

As France and Germany battled on the Western Front, observers turned their attention to Italy, a key to the German advance. Italy has promised to remain neutral, but France is exerting pressure to obtain passage through the country. Three mountain passes (1) St. Bernard, (2) Charbonnet and (3) Monaco converge on Turin (4), important Italian manufacturing city, and thence on Milan (5). From Milan, railroads give easy access to the Brenner Pass (6) and Klagenfurt Pass (7) into Germany. Fiume (8), Trieste (9) and Venice (10), Adriatic ports which provide a stream of supplies into blocked Germany, also are closely linked to Milan by rail. Bologna (11) is a main stop if an invader turned south from Milan toward Florence (13) and Rome. Italy's naval base at Spezia (12) also is vulnerable to attack from the northern passes.

LATEST BULLETINS

Basel, Switzerland, (near French, German and Swiss frontiers), Sept. 6 (AP)—First line pill boxes of Germany's formidable Siegfried line were seized tonight by veteran troops from the French Maginot line.

One of the first German advance posts which fell, it was reported in Basel, was a lone fort opposite Saarguemines, a French town opposite the Saar. It was said the fort was taken after very little fighting when French troops occupied the wooded hills on both sides of the frontier road.

London, Sept. 7 (Thursday)—(AP)—The British ministry of information announced early today the union of South Africa had declared war against Germany and that arrangements were being made to withdraw diplomatic representatives immediately.

Belfast, Sept. 6 (AP)—Lord Cragg, prime minister of northern Ireland (Ulster), said today Ulster would throw its "full weight and entire resources into this conflict, which has been forced upon Great Britain and the empire."

Nice, France, Sept. 6 (By radio via the U. S. S. Trenton)—(AP)—The French military interned about 150 Germans capable of carrying arms in the old square fort at Antibes today, and ordered German women, children and aged men to remain in their homes after making a special police registration.

Drafting of Big American Army Is Planned by Board

Mobilization of Huge Force Assured if U. S. Enters War

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—Within 30 days after the United States declares war—if it ever does—young Johnny Jones, able-bodied, unmarried and about 25, will be in the army, the first man in the country drafted for military service.

Meanwhile, probably 200,000 already will have volunteered to fill peace-time gaps in the regular army and national guard.

Three months later, more than a million recruits will have followed Johnny into the training camps, and half a million more in the navy.

Back home, some 2,350,000 other potential soldiers and sailors between the ages of 21 and 30, inclusive, will be waiting for the call to arms.

Recruiting Plan Ready
This is the mobilization picture for the first four months of war as envisioned by the joint army and navy selective service committee, which has a recruiting plan complete to the last detail.

Formulation of that plan began soon after the first World War, and it has been expanded and improved every year since. This is how it would work.

The president would proclaim a registration day for all men in a certain age group (probably 21 to 30 at first). Some 35,000,000 forms would be printed for registering the first 10,000,000 men. About 5,500 local draft boards would be created by governors.

Eight days after the president's proclamation, men designated in the age group would register at their voting precincts, and regular election officials would deliver their registration cards to the local boards.

Questionnaires Prepared
After the registration lists were numbered, checked and publicly posted, questionnaires would be sent to all registrants. From the information on these forms, local boards would classify each registrant as follows:

Class I—Those immediately available for service.
Class II—Those whose service would be deferred for a limited period because of the importance of their jobs to the nation.
Class III—Those whose service would be deferred because they have families solely dependent on them.
Class IV—Those whose service, for obvious reasons such as physical disability, would be undesirable. Those in class I would be called for medical examination and reclassified as (1) physically fit for unlimited service, (2) fit for limited service or (3) unfit. The latter in which they would be enrolled would be determined by lotteries as the army and navy called for them.

Another German Vessel Sunk in Warfare at Sea

Liner Inn Goes Down in Mid-Atlantic, Athenia Missing 125

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—Another German merchantman was added today to the list of victims of Britain's warfare at sea as 125 passengers of the British liner Athenia still were officially unaccounted for.

The North German-Lloyd liner motorship Inn which sailed from Bremen, Brazil, for Hamburg, Aug. 26, was reported sunk in mid-Atlantic. Details were lacking.

The British admiralty previously announced the sinking of three German merchant ships, but named only the Olinda and the Carl Fritzen, both sunk off the east coast of South America.

125 Missing on Athenia
Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, told the House of Commons that 125 passengers of the Athenia, sunk off Scotland Sunday night, were unaccounted for.

He added that "it is possible a number" of the missing might be aboard a Swedish yacht, the Southern Cross, which assisted in the rescue.

Reports from unofficial sources previously had made it appear that the death total would be only 49 persons. This total was arrived at when the master of the American freighter City of Flint reported to the U. S. Maritime commission that he had 216 survivors of the Athenia, including 106 Americans.

The Donaldson line, owners of the liner, reported 506 survivors landed at Galway, Ireland, and 497 at Greenock, Scotland, and that 150 were aboard the Southern Cross.

"I regret to inform the House that the disaster may prove to be of greater magnitude than was indicated by earlier reports," Churchill said.

Blames Submarine
He said a submarine torpedoed the liner and that it afterward "came to the surface and fired a shell which exploded on the middle of the deck."

"It is now clearly established," the admiralty had declared, "that the disaster was due to an attack without warning by a submarine at 7:45 p. m. on the night of Sept. 3." Churchill asserted the torpedo struck the ship near the engine room on the port side when she was 250 miles northwest of Ireland, and added that she was not armed for defense and carried no guns.

Davis said flour prices are controlled entirely by the Chicago grain market, which advanced its legal maximum of five cents each day during the last several days.

Charleston retailers have been limited to purchases for their immediate needs in sugar, for which prices have risen rapidly in the last 48 hours, wholesalers said.

The wholesale house officials said sugar has increased $1.35 a hundredweight since last Friday morning and "we have no certainty at this minute that we can buy any at that price." He said the price of hogs advanced $2.60 a hundredweight since Tuesday.

Rationing at Huntington
Sugar advanced $1 a hundred pounds at Huntington, where one wholesaler reported his stock exhausted and another said retailers were limiting purchases of 25 pounds.

Prices of grade A flour in Huntington jumped 70 cents a barrel, from $6.45 to $7.15 and cheaper grades from $3.45 to $4.30.

Beans and other staples were expected to advance in price shortly, along with bacon, beef and lard, Huntington merchants said.

A Huntington chain store executive said that "the housewives have created the situation themselves. They began to buy heavily over the week-end, causing the wholesalers and farmers and commodity men to 'ride' the boom by diminishing the supplies, thus raising the wholesale prices."

At Parkersburg, wholesale prices on lard advanced as much as $2 a hundred pounds while flour has risen from 80 cents to $1 a barrel.

Retail prices on sugar in Parkersburg Wednesday were as high as $1.60 for 25 pounds, against $1.32 last week. Coffee prices varied but some increases were noted.

The Parkersburg dealers offered no explanation other than that surplus stocks apparently were being held back in distribution centers for emergency purposes.

Some Fascists expressed the belief Italy's staying out of the war so far had shattered France's plans. They said they thought France had expected to smash at Italy and that the enforced change in plans explained the comparative lack of operations on Germany's western front.

Italy, while giving no indication that she plans to enter the war at present, nevertheless continued to call up groups of men to the colors. A number of naval reservists were called today.

Nazi Lines Stiffen as French Press Drive Between the Rhine and Moselle

The General Staff contained the first mention of German resistance. Feel Out Nazi Line
All along the front French advance units were feeling out German field organizations which were supported by automatic arms, the communiqué said.

Despite difficulties of the uneven, forest-covered area through which they were operating against prepared Nazi positions, the General Staff said its troops were advancing on German soil.

The evening communiqué, the second of the day to announce successes on the western front, said the "first elements" of the French offensive wave were "progressing beyond the (German) frontier with the advance variable according to different parts of the front."

"The activity of our aviation," it added, "is in liaison with land actions." "The movements foreseen for the mobilization, transport and installation of all units continue normally."

French Morale "Excellent"
"For the various formations officers, conforming to our traditions, look out as much as possible for the necessities of life for the troops, whose morale is excellent."

"The provisioning of the armies is functioning in the correct manner."

(The terms of the communiqué, especially the reference to "different parts of the front," made it appear that this was the broadest action yet seen on the western front in the new war.)

Newly mobilized troops continued to move up.

The French advance into Germany's industrially important Saarland, putting increased pressure on the German western wall of fortifications—which at some points are known to be many miles deep—in an effort to force the diversion of Nazi military forces from the drive into Poland, had been reported earlier.

Make Local Advances
The earlier communiqué said the Polish had made "local advances" on the western front.

The French were in contact with German forces all the way from the commencement of the frontier at Moselle, south of Luxembourg to the Rhine more than 100 miles southeast.

British and French planes were reported to have struck at German munitions plants and concentration centers, north of the Saar valley, which once was the backbone of German industrial life.

Reports in Paris said successful raids had been carried out on Aachen (Aix-La-Chapelle), near the Belgian border, and on nearby German war supply centers at Eschweiler and Stolberg.

German Motorized Troops Expected To Shell Lublin within Few Hours

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—Germany's motorized troops rolled forward over Polish roads tonight at such speed that German observers said Lublin, present seat of the Polish government, might be under German artillery fire tomorrow.

Experts said the advance, which today sped through the ancient city of Krakow without resistance, was ahead of the previously prepared schedule. Tonight the Germans were reported 18 miles east of Krakow, the "heart of Poland."

The German soldiers, moving through southwest Poland toward the east and north, were described as surprised that Poland's army was not putting up a stronger fight.

Meanwhile, no action whatsoever was reported on the French frontier.

German Leaders Puzzled
The lack of French and British moves was puzzling, German optimists theorized that political difficulties in Paris and London were hindering action; pessimists suggested that perhaps a surprise plan would be sprung.

It was said, however, that the western front was being kept strongly manned to prevent surprises. Officials insisted Germany would not be the first to strike there, restating that the Reich wants nothing in the west.

Several foreign reports that Berlin has been bombed were denied. Foreigners in the capital have seen no signs of enemy plane attacks.

Liner Bremen Safe
The North German Lloyd liner Bremen was reported to have arrived safely this morning in an unidentified neutral harbor, secure from British warships.

Krakow, the ancient Polish capital, with 242,000 population, left without a fight at noon to troops coming from the southwest between the Tatra mountains and the Silesian industrial region.

and it was not until 9:05 a. m. that the "all clear" signal was sounded. The populace took it calmly. Passengers in surface transportation vehicles merely climbed out and sought shelter.

Paris, too, had its air raid warnings. Twice the sirens screamed, and twice the populace took cover. The second time a semi-official source said German scouting planes had been driven off.

(French bombers, in the meantime, were reported to have made successful raids on German supply centers at Eschweiler and Stolberg, in the Aachen district near the Belgian border, west of Cologne.)

The British announced additional reconnaissance flights by their warplanes over Germany on Monday and Tuesday nights. A "note to the German people" was dropped last night. On two previous flights British planes scattered millions of leaflets over northern Germany advising the populace that their leaders had fomented the war.

(Berlin insisted that the British lost 12 planes in the Monday attack on the Cuihaven and Wilhelmshaven naval bases.)

(Official communiqués said 65 Polish planes had been shot down Monday and Tuesday. Berlin denied the Warsaw announcement that 30 Polish bombers had raided Berlin and returned to the bases without loss.)

Apology to Danes
A British apology was delivered to the Danish government for a "most unfortunate accident" in which bombs may have been dropped from a British bomber on the town of Esbjerg Monday. At least two persons were killed.

London explained that a plane fighting German craft during a raid on the Kiel canal might have become disabled and dumped its bombs on land instead of in the sea.

Von Brauchitsch Praises Hitler As Fine Soldier

Chief of Staff Says Fuehrer Is Model of Personal Courage

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of staff of the German army, in his order of the day to a rapidly advancing east army, held Adolf Hitler up as a soldier's "model of personal courage and stout determination."

He urged the soldiers to "keep after the enemy and apply all your strength until the final decision."

His appeal read: "Krakow, Bydgoszcz, Grudziadz are in our hands. The corridor no longer separates East Prussia and Danzig from the German motherland. The enemy is thrown back along the entire front and in retreat. Old tested front fighters of the world war as well as young soldiers share in the successes won in a short time."

"Our brave air force determinedly and prominently supported your battle. I thank all of you for your achievements which are worthy to be arranged beside the great deeds of the armies of German history."

"With the capture of Krakow the German army also has taken under its protection the great first Polish Marshal Pilsudski's aim was peace with Germany."

"Disregard of my trust led to war. The German army esteems and honors this great soldier. On command of the fuhrer an honor guard stands solemnly today at his grave."

"Soldiers, days of great accomplishments lie behind you! New tasks are to keep after the enemy, apply all your strength until the final decision. Trustingly, confidently all Germany stands behind you. Before us stands as a model of personal courage and stout determination our fuhrer, supreme commander in chief."

18 Polish Planes Reported Destroyed

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP) (Via Copenhagen)—German military headquarters reported tonight that "at least 18" Polish airplanes were destroyed by the German air force on the eastern front during the day.

Military dispatches said 12 were shot down in air battles and not less than six more were destroyed while on the ground at airports.

Special Session Of Congress May Be Called Soon

New York Times Says It May Convene by Sept. 15

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—The New York Times says official sources in close touch with Washington have disclosed that President Roosevelt may call Congress into special session as early as Sept. 15 to act upon revision of the neutrality act of 1937.

"Within the past ten days the president has discussed the calling of a special session with some of his close friends in New York," says the newspaper.

"In these conversations he has revealed that he considers the abandonment of neutrality restrictions an extremely delicate subject, in view of the widely held belief that the sale of arms abroad would draw this country into war."

"At the same time he is said to believe that Americans generally will realize soon that the conflict is not as remote as it might appear, and that they have a direct and tangible stake in the outcome. Once the latter idea crystallizes the president was reported ready to call the special session."

"From the current trend of events it is believed that Americans generally would soon be brought to believe that they can not remain entirely aloof from the war in Europe. The submarine attack on the steamship Athenia was cited as one important event demonstrating this country's concern with war. The opinion was advanced that similar incidents would quickly bring America's reactions to the boiling point."

This is the mobilization picture for the first four months of war as envisioned by the joint army and navy selective service committee, which has a recruiting plan complete to the last detail.

Formulation of that plan began soon after the first World War, and it has been expanded and improved every year since. This is how it would work.

The president would proclaim a registration day for all men in a certain age group (probably 21 to 30 at first). Some 35,000,000 forms would be printed for registering the first 10,000,000 men. About 5,500 local draft boards would be created by governors.

Eight days after the president's proclamation, men designated in the age group would register at their voting precincts, and regular election officials would deliver their registration cards to the local boards.

Questionnaires Prepared
After the registration lists were numbered, checked and publicly posted, questionnaires would be sent to all registrants. From the information on these forms, local boards would classify each registrant as follows:

Class I—Those immediately available for service.
Class II—Those whose service would be deferred for a limited period because of the importance of their jobs to the nation.
Class III—Those whose service would be deferred because they have families solely dependent on them.
Class IV—Those whose service, for obvious reasons such as physical disability, would be undesirable.

Those in class I would be called for medical examination and reclassified as (1) physically fit for unlimited service, (2) fit for limited service or (3) unfit. The order in which they would be enrolled would be determined by lotteries as the army and navy called for them.

Liner Inn Goes Down in Mid-Atlantic, Athenia Missing 125

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—Another German merchantman was added today to the list of victims of Britain's warfare at sea as 125 passengers of the British liner Athenia still were officially unaccounted for.

The North German-Lloyd liner, which sailed from Bremen, Aug. 26, was reported sunk in mid-Atlantic. Details were lacking.

The British admiralty previously announced the sinking of three German merchant ships, but named only the Olinda and the Carl Fritzen, both sunk off the east coast of South America.

125 Missing on Athenia
Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, told the House of Commons that 125 passengers of the Athenia, sunk off Scotland Sunday night, were unaccounted for.

He added that "it is possible a number" of the missing might be aboard a Swedish yacht, the Southern Cross, which assisted in the rescue.

Reports from unofficial sources previously had made it appear that the death total would be only 49 persons. This total was arrived at when the master of the American freighter City of Flint reported to the U. S. Maritime commission that he had 216 survivors of the Athenia, including 106 Americans.

The Donaldson line, owners of the liner, reported 506 survivors landed at Galway, Ireland, and 497 at Greenock, Scotland, and that 150 were aboard the Southern Cross.

"I regret to inform the House that the disaster may prove to be of greater magnitude than was indicated by earlier reports," Churchill said.

Blames Submarine
He said a submarine torpedoed the liner and that it afterward "came to the surface and fired a shell which exploded on the middle of the deck."

"It is now clearly established," the admiralty had declared, "that the disaster was due to an attack without warning by a submarine at 7:45 p. m. on the night of Sept. 3."

Churchill asserted the torpedo struck the ship near the engine room on the port side when she was 250 miles northwest of Ireland, and added that she was not armed for defense and carried no guns.

15 Germans Executed

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP) (via Amsterdam)—DNB, the official German news agency, republished a report of the East German Morning Post which said Polish authorities executed 15 citizens of German nationality at Krolewska Huta, just before the German army occupied Silesia in Poland.

drawn price quotations until the market opens up."

Davis said flour prices are controlled entirely by the Chicago grain market, which advanced its legal maximum of five cents each day during the last several days.

Charleston retailers have been limited to purchases for their immediate needs in sugar, for which prices have risen rapidly in the last 48 hours, wholesalers said.

The wholesale house officials said sugar has increased $1.35 a hundredweight since last Friday morning and "we have no certainty at this minute that we can buy any at that price." He said the price of hogs advanced $2.60 a hundredweight since Tuesday.

Rationing at Huntington
Sugar advanced $1 a hundred pounds at Huntington, where one wholesaler reported his stock exhausted and another said retailers were limiting purchases of 25 pounds.

Prices of grade A flour in Huntington jumped 70 cents a barrel, from $6.45 to $7.15 and cheaper grades from $3.65 to $4.30.

Beans and other staples were expected to advance in price shortly, along with bacon, beef and lard, Huntington merchants said.

A Huntington chain store executive said that "the housewives have created the situation themselves. They began to buy heavily over the week-end, causing the wholesalers and farmers and commodity men to 'ride' the boom by diminishing the supplies, thus raising the wholesale prices."

At Parkersburg, wholesale prices on lard advanced as much as $2 a hundred pounds while flour has risen from 80 cents to $1 a barrel.

Retail prices on sugar in Parkersburg Wednesday were as high as $1.60 for 25 pounds, against $1.32 last week. Coffee prices varied but some increases were noted.

The Parkersburg dealers offered no explanation other than that surplus stocks apparently were being held back in distribution centers for emergency purposes.

Some Fascists expressed the belief Italy's staying out of the war so far had shattered France's plans. They said they thought France had expected to smash at Italy and that the enforced change in plans explained the comparative lack of operations on Germany's western front.

Italy, while giving no indication that she plans to enter the war at present, nevertheless continued to call up groups of men to the colors. A number of naval reservists were called today.

"It's no more a cheap political trick than what was done by you yesterday morning—this straw man you brought up for the purpose of smearing the Republican party," Thomas retorted. "Nothing was submitted by Mr. Browder to show that such a man existed."

Browder yesterday told the committee that a man he could identify only as "Davidson" offered the Communist party $250,000 if it would nominate President Roosevelt as its presidential candidate in 1936. Browder said the man said he represented a small group of Republicans.

The General Staff contained the first mention of German resistance.

Feel Out Nazi Line
All along the front French advance units were feeling out German field organizations which were supported by automatic arms, the communique said.

Despite difficulties of the uneven, forest-covered area through which they were operating against prepared Nazi positions, the General Staff said its troops were advancing on German soil.

The evening communique, the second of the day to announce successes on the western front, said the "first elements" of the French offensive wave were "progressing beyond the (German) frontier with the advance variable according to different parts of the front."

"The activity of our aviation," it added, "is in liaison with land actions."

"The movements foreseen for this mobilization, transport and installation of all units continue normally."

French Morale "Excellent"

"For the various formations officers, conforming to our traditions, look out as much as possible for the necessities of life for the troops, whose morale is excellent."

"The provisioning of the armies is functioning in the correct manner."

(The terms of the communique, especially the reference to "different parts of the front," made it appear that this was the broadest action yet seen on the western front in the new war.)

Newly mobilized troops continued to move up.

The French advance into Germany's industrially important Saarland, putting increased pressure on the German western wall of fortifications—which at some points are known to be many miles deep—in an effort to force the diversion of Nazi military forces from the drive into Poland, had been reported earlier.

Make Local Advances

The earlier communique said the Poles had made "local advances" on the western front.

The French were in contact with German forces all the way from the commencement of the frontier at Moselle, south of Luxembourg, to the Rhine more than 100 miles southeast.

British and French planes were reported to have struck at German munitions plants and concentration centers, north of the Saar valley—which once was the backbone of German industrial life.

Reports in Paris said successful raids had been carried out on Aachen (Aix-La-Chapelle), near the Belgian border, and on nearby German war supply centers at Eschweiler and Stolberg.

German Motorized Troops Expected To Shell Lublin within Few Hours

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—Germany's motorized troops rolled forward over Polish roads tonight at such speed that German observers said Lublin, present seat of the Polish government, might be under German artillery fire tomorrow.

Experts said the advance, which today sped through the ancient city of Krakow without resistance, was ahead of the previously prepared schedule. Tonight the Germans were reported 18 miles east of Krakow, the "heart of Poland."

The German soldiers, moving through southwest Poland toward the east and north, were described as surprised that Poland's army was not putting up a stronger fight.

Meanwhile, no action whatsoever was reported on the French frontier.

(The French communique reported "local advances" for the French on this front.)

German Leaders Puzzled

The lack of French and British moves was puzzling. German optimists theorized that political difficulties in Paris and London were hindering action; pessimists suggested that perhaps a surprise plan would be sprung.

It was said, however, that the western front was being kept strongly manned to prevent surprises. Officials insisted Germany would not be the first to strike there, restating that the Reich wants nothing in the west.

Several foreign reports that Berlin has been bombed were denied. Foreigners in the capital have seen no signs of enemy plane attacks.

Liner Bremen Safe

The North German Lloyd liner Bremen was reported to have arrived safely this morning in an unidentified neutral harbor, secure from British warships.

Krakow, the ancient Polish capital, with 242,000 population, fell without a fight at noon to troops coming from the southwest between the Tatra mountains and the Silesian industrial region.

Britain Reports Repulse Of First Nazi Air Raiders

and it was not until 9:05 a. m. that the "all clear" signal was sounded.

The populace took it calmly. Passengers in surface transportation vehicles merely climbed out and sought shelter.

Paris, too, had its air raid warnings. Twice the sirens screamed, and twice the populace took cover.

The second time a semi-official source said German scouting planes had been driven off.

"French bombers, in the meantime, were reported to have made successful raids on German supply centers at Eschweiler and Stolberg, in the Aachen district near the Belgian border, west of Cologne."

The British announced additional reconnaissance flights by their planes over Germany on Monday and Tuesday nights. A "note to the German people" was dropped last night. On two previous flights British planes scattered millions of leaflets over northern Germany advising the populace that their leaders had fomented the war.

Berlin insisted that the British lost 12 planes in the Monday attack on the Cuhaven and Wilhelmshaven naval bases.

Official communiques said 65 Polish planes had been shot down Monday and Tuesday. Berlin denied the Warsaw announcement that 30 Polish bombers had raided Berlin and returned to the bases without loss.

Apology to Danes
A British apology was delivered to the Danish government for a "most unfortunate accident" in which bombs may have been dropped from a British bomber on the town of Esbjerg Monday. At least two persons were killed.

Md. Organizations To Participate in Drive for Safety

John McMullen of Cumberland Named Member of Committee

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 6 (AP)—Representatives of a score of Maryland civic, fraternal and veterans' organizations launched a concerted effort to reduce highway deaths in the state today by pledging their support to the Maryland Traffic Safety Council, sponsored by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor.

Nearly a hundred persons jammed the Senate chamber at the state house this afternoon to participate in the organization meeting, soon to be followed by a series of regional conferences.

Governor O'Connor, representatives of state departments and of the national and Baltimore safety councils outlined the plan and the governor named the council's executive committee, comprised of the following:

Mrs. Harry L. Harcum of Salisbury, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs; Washington I. Cleveland of Kensington, representing the American Automobile Association; Edwin A. Dempsey, John R. Sherwood and Samuel Hofferger, all of Baltimore; Dr. S. S. Steinberg of the University of Maryland department of engineering.

Also: Caesar A. Aiello of Hyattsville, representing the Maryland department, American Legion; Mrs. Guy R. Clements of Annapolis, representing the Maryland Parent-Teachers Association; William Johnston, Chestertown publisher; John McMullen, Cumberland publisher; Major Ezra B. Whitman, State Roads Commission chairman; W. Lee Elgin, Motor Vehicles Commissioner; Col. Beverly Ober, head of the state police; Dr. Albert S. Cook, state superintendent of education, and Robert F. Stanton, Baltimore police commissioner.

Members of this committee will be in charge of the work in general and will be aided by six sub-committees, to be named.

Special Session Of Congress May Be Called Soon

New York Times Says It May Convene by Sept. 15

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—The New York Times says official sources in close touch with Washington have disclosed that President Roosevelt may call Congress into special session as early as Sept. 15 to act upon revision of the neutrality act of 1937.

"Within the past ten days the president has discussed the calling of a special session with some of his close friends in New York," says the newspaper.

"In these conversations he has revealed that he considers the abandonment of neutrality restrictions an extremely delicate subject, in view of the widely held belief that the sale of arms abroad would draw this country into war."

"At the same time he is said to believe that Americans generally will realize soon that the conflict is not as remote as it might appear, and that they have a direct and tangible stake in the outcome. Once the latter idea crystallizes the president was reported ready to call the special session."

"From the current trend of events it is believed that Americans generally would soon be brought to believe that they can not remain entirely aloof from the war in Europe. The submarine attack on the steamship Athenia was cited as one important event demonstrating this country's concern with war. The opinion was advanced that similar incidents would quickly bring America's reactions to the boiling point."

Sees Special Session

Indianapolis, Sept. 6 (AP)—United States Senator Sherman Minton, Democratic whip, predicted today a special session of Congress between now and Oct. 1 for revision of American neutrality legislation.

Von Brauchitsch Praises Hitler As Fine Soldier

Chief of Staff Says Fuehrer Is Model of Personal Courage

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of staff of the German army, in his order of the day to a rapidly advancing east army, held Adolf Hitler up as a soldier's "model of personal courage and stout determination."

He urged the soldiers to "after the enemy and apply all your strength until the final decision."

His appeal read: "Krakow, Bydgoszcz, Grudziadz are in our hands. The corridor no longer separates East Prussia and Danzig from the German motherland. The enemy is thrown back along the entire front and in retreat. Old tested front fighters of the world war as well as young soldiers share in the successes won in a short time."

"Our brave air force determinedly and prominently supported your battle. I thank all of you for your achievements which are worthy to be arranged beside the great deeds of the armies of German history."

"With the capture of Krakow, the German army also has taken under its protection the grave of first Polish Marshal Pilsudski. His aim was peace with Germany."

"Disregard of his trust led to war. The German army esteems and honors this great soldier. On command of the fuhrer an honor guard stands solemnly today at his grave."

"Soldiers, days of great accomplishments lie behind you! Now the task is to keep after the enemy, apply all your strength until the final decision. Trustingly, confidently all Germany stands behind you. Before us stands as a model of personal courage and stout determination our fuhrer, supreme commander in chief."

"Forward to victory!"

18 Polish Planes Reported Destroyed

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP) (Via Copenhagen)—German military headquarters reported tonight that "at least 18" Polish airplanes were destroyed by the German air force on the eastern front during the day.

Military dispatches said 12 were shot down in air battles and not less than six more were destroyed while on the ground at airports.

After One Last Fling To Aid Friend Radium Mover Really Swears Off

By The AP Feature Service

Pittsburgh—Ten years ago Arthur L. Miller gave up one of the most dangerous jobs in the world—moving radium.

He quit, after burying three associates in the business, because "I thought it high time to get out when I saw my friends looking around for flowers for me." Now he's an insurance agent here.

For Old Time's Sake

But the other day he got back into the harness to oblige a friend, Dr. G. Failla, physicist in charge of radium for the Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases in New York.

Dr. Failla wanted four grams of radium, worth $100,000, moved to the hospital's new quarters.

First, Miller donned a mask connected to 25 feet of hose leading to air not contaminated by gases given off by the radium. The radium was in safes, connected to pumps that take off the gases for medicinal use.

Working in pants, undershirt and masks, he disconnected one flask of radium salts, already in a porcelain container inside a brass container, wrapped it in absorbent cotton and paper and put it into a glass beaker. He wrapped the beaker in cotton and paper, put it into an enameled pail and wrapped that, too, in cotton and paper, and put it into a larger, galvanized iron pail. That pail was carried out and put into a heavy wooden case bolted to the floor of a station wagon. Two case loads at a time was the limit for one moving. Each load was guarded by two policemen.

Thousands of Millegrams
Miller was reputed to have received $1,000 for the New York moving job. He hesitates to estimate how much radium he has worked with.

"It runs into several thousand of millegrams," he said, and added that whatever the amount, he suspected it was too much. He displayed his fingers which had been affected by radium exposure. One thumb had a deep cut, which he said he received back in the 20's while handling radium for the University of California. He told about it.

"Radium is like sunshine in a way. You go out in the hot sun without a shirt, but you don't notice the result until later. It's the same way with radium. Only radium injuries don't show up as quickly. I didn't pay any attention to this thumb burn. Then one day I flicked off a pimple with the thumb and a day later I was in the hospital. They cut down to the bone, but saved the thumb. My resistance was lowered by the radium and infection set in rapidly."

It was in 1927 that he decided to give up the business.

"Sometimes I worked, sometimes I didn't," he said. "I felt weak all the time."

His hands ached after each handling of radium.

Miller to Miller
Asked how much he earned, Miller said:

"I've never told anyone how much I get. Some people have made some wild guesses and the figures run pretty high. But don't forget you earn every penny."

Content to continue writing insurance now, the gray-haired Miller, who is a widower, plans no more radium excursions.

How would Arthur L. Miller, the insurance man, rate Arthur L. Miller, the radium expert, as a risk?

"He wouldn't be worth a dime said the insurance man."

Kentucky Dam Blocks The Tennessee River

Gilbertsville Ky. (AP)—The huge TVA dam under construction here has a name now, for the sake of efficiency.

The dam hitherto has been known as the Gilbertsville dam. But, said John B. Blanding, the TVA's general manager, the name was so similar to that of the Guntersville Ala. dam that the two frequently were confused.

So the Gilbertsville project is to be known hereafter as the Kentucky dam.

It is being built on the Tennessee river.

"I'm all right, but gosh, I sure do feel dumb," he said later, after parachuting into a cow pasture.

School Days

SCHOOL DAYS, school days, saddest and gladdest of the year. Saddest for children who, with the first day of school, must bid farewell to the freedom of vacation days and gladdest to mothers who then begin their vacation.

It is hard for outdoor and play-loving boys to return to school, but after a day or two they find that school isn't a bad place to be after all. The three R's are not such a bitter pill when taken with liberal doses of sports, recess games and school-days' companionship. There have been two revolutionary developments in education—free schools and popular schools. Once parents could not keep their children in school. Now they could not keep them out of school. The schools, not the children, deserve the credit.

Mother breathes a sigh of relief when school opens for them she can pack the little Indians off to school and enjoy a few hours of peace and quiet. Teachers who have had practical experience in getting a child ready for school can appreciate what they ask when they urge their pupils to report each session with clean faces and hands, clean clothes, hair combed and teeth clean.

The great trek back to the schoolroom is on and the shouts and laughter will not be distinguishable from those that accompanied the equally great exodus last spring.

Bond Defaulters

MORE THAN TWO BILLION DOLLARS of bonds of foreign countries is in default, out of a total of more than five billions held in the United States.

All Latin-American countries, except Argentina, Uruguay and Guatemala, are in default. All German dollar bonds, including national, state, municipal and corporation issues, are in default. These German debtors cannot use any credit balances held in United States banks, to apply on interest charges, but must pay by marks through Berlin, when and if payments are resumed. Hitler doesn't overlook anything at the controls.

Brazil is in complete default and a few years ago boasted of a century of freedom from default. Mexico is in complete default, and makes bad matters worse by grabbing foreign owned lands and oil properties, valued at a billion dollars and more.

Russia is in complete default on all issues.

Only about four per cent of Canadian dollar bonds, out of a total of one and three-quarter billions, is in default and these are the provincial bonds of Alberta, where a "new deal" was attempted, to bring back prosperity by the sorcery of "social credit" currency and a promise of $25 a month to everybody from the provincial government. Alberta, under a fanatical reform premier, has the distinction of being the first and only Canadian province to default on a bond issue.

Among the European countries giving full service on dollar bonds are little Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Estonia, Lithuania and Finland.

These facts and figures are from the fifth annual report of the Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council. Out of a total of 637 issues of bonds, 275 are listed as in default.

This is the serious situation that confronts United States investors, who have bought the dollar bonds of foreign countries. The enormous load of debt of these European and Latin-American countries, held by their own people, is a story yet to be told. It is reported that such debt in Germany alone is equivalent to twenty-five billions of dollars.

This information, together with the recollection about the big war debt Europe still owes us, is something to be kept in mind if efforts should be made by foreign governments to raise more money in this country for war purposes. Under the present neutrality act, however, belligerents may not float war bonds in this country; and the Johnson act forbids loans to those owing us war debts in arrears.

Include Us Out

WHEN the European propaganda mills are tilted in this direction, seeking to involve the United States in its latest slaughter, Americans cwe it to themselves to get damn mad and to engage in some of the uncouth, ungrammatical language Europeans are prone to attach to the lips of the Homo Americano.

Europeans should be told that when it comes to winning any more wars for them, to include us out.

If the United States again permits itself to be drawn into the gory European mess, the billions of dollars our late allies and enemies have stuck us for will have been lost in vain. For years it has been said that it was a good thing they didn't pay, because it would keep us out of their next war.

But if we cling on the debts by these European nations doesn't keep us out, losing the money was a bad thing, and the American people are indeed the dumbest in the world.

Of course, nobody in the United States except a few perverts would be sorry if the murderous devilry of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin now ended in the trio becoming buzzard bait, but this is a matter Europe ought to be able to arrange without assistance—financial or otherwise—from the United States.

If the democracies of Europe are worth a hoof they will take care of this problem. If any of this walking carrion that terms itself Der Stalin, Il Hitler and Comrade Deuce ever starts in this direction, we'll feed them to the buzzards.

But until then, include the United States out!

And even before they begin talking about asking the United States to join the bloody slaughter, Europeans should have the decency to make some reasonable explanation about the twelve billions which they still owe us and which they have repudiated.

Neutrals Upset

TO BE BYSTANDERS encircled by nations which are at one another's throats has been for generations the traditional role of Holland and Switzerland. Centuries ago, the Netherlands and Helvetia were in the path of warring armies of Europe, but during the more recent major conflicts they have been able to preserve the attitude and the privileges of the onlooker. This strange immunity from general carnage has been the bewilderment of historians, who find many and conflicting reasons for the existence of these peaceful islands in a turbulent sea. However, as the latest dispatches indicate, all is not so well as appears on the surface.

The Swiss are mobilizing 100,000 troops as a covering squad for her frontiers. In Switzerland, as in every other nation, troops mean a heavy drain on the country's resources. Already an order has been put into effect forbidding purchase of many foodstuffs, a suggestion of the possibility of a general rationing program. And in Holland also has gone out an order for mobilization, bringing the small standing army to 400,000. The Americans have been warned to leave the country at once.

These two countries continue to maintain their proverbial attitude of strict neutrality, but it is evident that they cannot remain wholly unaffected by war or the threat of war. In such circumstances, the entire organization of these peaceful states undergoes a radical change.

Another Circle

SO we have another wonder gun. The army authorities have demonstrated it before a small party of veterans of the Civil war. Doubtless it gave them quite a thrill.

"It's so simple a baby could operate it," the officer who put on the show remarked. "It's the finest anti-tank weapon in the world—it can't be touched. It will penetrate two-inch armor or a concrete wall two feet thick at 1,500 yards. It will shoot with accuracy for seven miles. It has the highest velocity of any weapon known to the world today—2,600 feet per second. It'll put out twenty-five rounds of ammunition a minute. By pulling a lever, you can swing it freely from side to side and take care of a number of high-speed tanks coming at you at once." What all that means, of course, is that the fellows whose business it is to circumvent wonder guns have a task. It is to put another inch on the two-inch armor which the wonder gun's projectile can penetrate and add another foot to the two-foot wall. And then there will be another job for the makers of wonder guns. What has been done, therefore, is just to create another of those vicious circles of which we so frequently read.

It Must Cease

SINCE 1930, the rise in federal taxes has been steadier and more precipitate than at any other period in American history. The fiscal burden, in fact, has been almost doubled.

Sad to relate, it would take more than nine and a half billions of dollars to balance the budget under present fiscal conditions. And, despite that alarming state of affairs, the administration keeps clamoring for larger and larger expenditures.

Entirely apart from any question as to the likelihood or possibility of national bankruptcy, it appears that deficit spending must cease if business is to regain the confidence essential to a full flow of capital and a revitalization of investment and productivity.

In amusing Louisiana, a condition arises whereby it may be necessary to send out of the state to complete a jury.

The Best Side of a Man

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Know how to get on the best side of a man? Ask him to do something for you.

Not something enormous. Not something that demands too much of him. Not anything you have no right to ask of any man.

But something he can easily grant you, and will willingly do for you.

Ask him for that. Ask him, in effect, to give you a portion of himself.

Afterwards he will like you more than he did before.

Do you know why it works out this way? Do you know why he will then think more pleasantly of you? Do you know why YOU feel a friendliness toward a man YOU have helped?

Perhaps I can't set down the relationship that has arisen in all details, but I can guess at it. . . . You ask me to do something for you and you make me feel useful. I'm something more than nobody; I am able to help another human being. . . . You put yourself under obligations to me and that is not unpleasant. I am a creditor as well as a debtor and I like that.

I feel that you will like me because I have helped you. It is good to be liked. . . . And, most important of all, you have compelled me to use the best part of myself. I want to do that. I know I should use that side of me more than I do. And helping you warms me and strengthens me and makes me feel better than I know I am. . . . So when you ask me to do something for you, you get on the best side of me.

But don't make the mistake of too obviously paying off the obligation. A man does not wish his friends to be grateful, but he hates the thought that you look upon your friendship as a business relationship, in which if he does something for you then you must do something for him. . . . The man who refuses to be "obligated to anybody" prides himself on his sturdy independence, but he flouts that independence in every man's face and offends the weaker mass of us. We admire him but he dims the flame of our affection by a little.

And do not ask too much or too often. Your friend is glad to be helpful, but he cannot carry you the whole distance. . . . Keep him as your friend, do not ask him to be your meal ticket.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

In pre-Elizabethan England, Ben Walmesley, a popular actor, got so much notoriety that it almost ruined his career.

Edwin C. Hill

That's Ben Walmesley, the groundlings would yell.

Hollywood is beginning to suffer from the same overlapping of fantasy and reality. I am told that the dilemma appears in an especially aggravated form in the casting for John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath." Here is the difficulty:

A distinguished actress of long experience was tentatively chosen for the role of Ma Joad. She was admirably suited for the part capable of rising to its high tragedy and pathos. But the trouble is that all America knows of her foreign cars, her Beverly Hills mansion, her Russian wolf hounds, her villa on the Riviera, her jewels and her exotic garden. Too much public familiarity with such detail warps the pattern of Celluloid dramaturgy.

As battered old Ma Joad, hands gnarled and knotted by years of drudgery, her face seamed by the unending erosion of worry and toil, climbs into that grotesque old jalopy, there surely will be an obtrusive thought of her Panhard car. The Joad shack in the cotton patch will fade into the Tudor mansion with its velvety lawns and marble swimming pool. And bang goes the dramatic antithesis for which the director is striving.

Up Many Times

That, at least, was the conclusion of the producers. They are picking another actress, less known to the public, with an assurance that no knowledge of her butterfly life will interfere with her portrayal of the classically humble and grimly courageous Ma Joad.

The problem has arisen many times in Hollywood in the last year or two. The personality of a star of the first magnitude registers so definitely with the public, his manner of life, his possessions, his marriages, his whims and his hobbies become so widely known that they constitute a reality which is resistant against his creation of illusion.

Fancy, whether bred in the heart or the head, gets mixed up with reality. Hollywood marriages and divorces, particularly, have accentuated this obstacle to the smooth flow of romance on the screen.

While the percentage of divorce and remarriage in filmland is, I believe, only slightly greater than that of the rest of the populace, the industry of the gossip columnists, the whispers and rumors which sweep the country from this cave of the winds, the unending flare of lurid publicity—all this builds in the mind of the audience definite ideas about this or that star and stubborn predilections about whom he shouldn't marry. This is important, as a large majority of screen plays are love tales.

Are Piping Down

Both producers and players are piping down on any fanfare attendant to screen romance, marriage or divorce. Recent weddings among the stars have been almost furtively carried through in remote crossroad towns. Publicity about the Hellogabian chariots and Babylonian gardens of the stars is being discouraged, and the taste, restraint and domesticity in the stellar regions are being emphasized.

All this is something entirely apart from the concern about the traditional high kicking and low thinking at Hollywood. It bears definitely on what seems to be the obvious fact that the more the public knows about a player, or thinks it knows, the more blurred and ineffective will be the screen illusion. In pre-Elizabethan England, many players lived monastic lives, in keeping with the roles of sacred or sainted personages to which they were assigned. Hollywood might have to become a sort of Chau-

China was printing from wood blocks as early as 50 B. C., and using movable type in 1041, four centuries before Gutenberg printed his Bible.

Spain and Switzerland had printing long before William Caxton set up his English press in 1476, and Giovanni Paoli established a press in Mexico City a full century before Stephen Day and his son began at Cambridge. Printing in this country, like the Republic itself, is modern contrasted to man's age-old thirst for knowledge.

It is important to note, however, that early America waited only briefly after Jamestown and Plymouth Rock to utilize the press for information, enlightenment, unification and concerted achievements for the public weal. Today, as in 1639, the press remains indispensable to a free and unoppressed America. It is pertinently symbolic of this nation's most zealously guarded traditions.

On the Record

By Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican, of Massachusetts.

Encouraged by growing popular support for our constructive policies, Republicans in Congress pledge a continuance of this fight for fundamental Americanism. In session and out, we will battle New Deal Socialism at every step of the road.

The people of the United States are tired of hit-or-miss government. The country wants to get out of the red, and back to work. It wants to try honest bookkeeping, honest politics, and honest Americanism for a change.

Hitler Is Not 'Bumped Off' for Fear Goebbels Might Be Worse Successor

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Adolf Hitler isn't at all popular among Americans who have come in contact with him. In the main these include embassies and consular officials. Now and then one or another of these functionaries has visited the United States on leave during the period of Der Fuehrer's incumbency and I've talked with several of them quite recently. One was a relative of mine, who expressed himself to me very freely. Naturally these chaps all have had a vehement "passion for anonymity." If any one of them were quoted by name, Germany would be too bilious for him to go back to while Adolf remains on the job.

But General Field Marshal Hermann Goering, just appointed head of the ministerial council in defense of the reich, and generally regarded as No. 2 Nazi, is pretty well liked—that is to say, personally, not necessarily politically.

However, Herr Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda minister, usually rated as No. 3 Nazi—until Hitler named Radolf Hess as next in line to Goering—seems to have even fewer well-posted American friends than Adolf himself. When I asked how it happens that some anti-Nazi German (a Jew, for instance) hasn't already tried to bump the present Fuehrer off, the answer invariably has been that everybody has been afraid Goebbels, instead of Goering, might succeed him. And it's the consensus that Goebbels would be worse than Hitler.

Hitler a Genius

That Hitler's a downright genius is unexceptionally agreed. The complaint is that, though a genius, he's abnormal, if not actually insane. He's assessed as homicidal in his peculiarities, too. Apparently he isn't companionable, either. He doesn't drink beer, as an orthodox German should. He has no smoking smokes stick up all over his premises. He's a vegetarian.

They say he's abusive in conversation; he raves and rants; he's personally insulting to his visitors. In short, the verdict is that, as an individual, he's a darned sight worse than the ex-kaiser ever was. The kaiser had some of the superficialities of polite society. Der Fuehrer is accused of being an unqualified barbarian—not only untristrically, but in his manners.

Some of the folk I've talked with, who have met both of the two have compared Hitler with Mussolini. They've concluded that Benito, while a dictator, is a rational, human type of one—a bird who can be talked with reasonably. Not so Adolf, according to these authorities.

Such critics don't believe that Adolf and Benito basically have much in common. They calculate that Benito is pretty tired of Adolf now—that he considers the latter dangerously cuckoo.

Goering a Semi-Good Guy

Marshall Goering is classified as intrinsically a nice German—like our own old-time German-Americans.

He's represented as a "good fellow."

He slushes beer, eats "weenies"—and you like him.

They had sanger-burds and hand-burds in those days, and nobody found any fault with 'em—in fact, sympathized with 'em.

In those times this country was full of German immigrants who were here because they were in exile to get away from the Fatherland's military conscription. In that era, a fat chance Germany would have had to develop a Nazi-bund in America! Militarism then was what our Germans were dying to get away from.

Marshall Goering, then, is a German we think that we more or less understand.

Not so, as I understand it, Herr Hitler's.

And Herr Goebbels, from all accounts, is as crazy as Herr Hitler, without being a genius also.

Two speakers at a Denver welfare conference united in pleading for more attention to young people if prisons are not to be kept filled.

They were James J. Johnston, warden at Alcatraz and James Bennett, director of the federal bureau of prisons.

"If we would spend more time and effort and money in the making of our citizens we would not be obliged to spend so much time in attempts toward their remarking." That was Warden Johnston speaking.

"More than half the persons leaving prisons this year will be back again in five years," said Director Bennett.

We will may be alarmed at the crime toll. In spite of the efforts of the Boy Scouts and other welfare agencies, in spite of our schools and churches the problem of youthful crime impends. Some of it, of course, is due to the depression.

It is so easy for a young fellow to associate with improper companions if he is without the scope of the Boy Scout influence or welfare agencies. It is easy for him to become a potential criminal if he has no work to do. The depression is seeing to that—and unless private enterprise is permitted to expand as it should, unless we abandon relief rolls, we can only expect a further demoralizing effect especially among the young.

It is not sound doctrine to denounce youth as a whole for the sins of a few young people. But conditions are such that the tendency is toward an increase in crime by youth. It is the duty of the adults to watch over adolescence and on every opportunity offer help toward worth-while living.

The new army regulations adopted September 1, 1939, reduce the cadence of marching troops to 120 steps a minute, from the old 120. Reason: soldiers stepped on each other's heels under the old system.

Column Policy Is Laid Down

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Sept. 6.—Writing this column has been a lot of fun. It is going to be less so. It used to be a delight to wind up and take a shot at Honest Harold Ickes. He didn't mind. He had so much ammunition and a longer range than I had. He gleefully used his guns. Then we had lunch together and fought it all over again in good temper.

Hugh S. Johnson

I can't do that any more. Honest old is our man on the spot. He is or will be responsible that the supply of our greatest national resources—coal and oil—doesn't break down. I would as soon think of joggling his arm, as I would of tickling a surgeon under the ribs at the critical moment in an operation on the human heart—or pulling the seat-cushion out from under an aviator who is trying to bring me safely down in a line-squall.

Not Eye to Eye

My old friend, the president and I haven't seen eye to eye lately on many things. I have cracked him plenty. He knows how to crack too. He got me into the famous Oval Room and went around me a cooper goes around a barrel. Since the day I reported from West Point as a second lieutenant to that lusty old Indian fighter Greaser Hughes, colonel of the First cavalry—and forgot to attend reveille—I have been panned by experts—but never like that. No more. Farewell to Lochaber. The president, Mr. Ickes, Muddom Perkins—ever Tommy the Cork. Leon the Hen and Benny the Cone—all these pet peevs are in the pilot's seat and it is our boat that is tossing.

I have been in positions of great responsibility at critical periods—and have seen others there. I know how minds work at such times. They feel the weight of the happiness of 25,000,000 homes and the peace of mind of 130,000,000 people—and that is all they feel. They may be stupid, inexperienced and inept, but they are putting out the last ounce. They need the respect and confidence of the people they are working for and what is far more important, these people need their freedom from annoyance.

I don't mean that I am going to shut my mouth on what I think is my duty to call 'em as I see 'em. That is my job. But I do mean, as the president himself suggested, that I am going to be far more careful to check facts, to withhold judgment on the motives behind acts, to abstain from too many joyous wisecracks and in my small way hold up the hands of every person in public life who is trying to unite us, to make us stronger and to keep us out of war.

As to Purchasing

As this column has said always since the argument started, the president is perfectly right in his demand for a revision of the Neutrality act to permit all powers who can do so to purchase arms here. The arms embargo didn't spring from any aspect of neutrality—only from a reluctance to deal in deadly weapons. But that happens to work un-neutrality. Furthermore, it is unimportant in principle. Except airplanes, we have no weapons to sell, and, even as to planes, we shall have demands of our own to our capacity to produce. So let's promptly give the president what he asks on this and show a little unity.</

School Days

SCHOOL DAYS, school days, saddest and gladdest of the year. Saddest for children who, with the first day of school, must bid farewell to the freedom of vacation days and gladdest to mothers who then begin their vacation.

It is hard for outdoor and play-loving boys to return to school, but after a day or two they find that school isn't a bad place to be after all. The three R's are not such a bitter pill when taken with liberal doses of sports, recess games and school-days' companionship. There have been two revolutionary developments in education—free schools and popular schools. Once parents could not keep their children in school. Now they could not keep them out of school. The schools, not the children, deserve the credit.

Mother breathes a sigh of relief when school opens for then she can pack the little Indians off to school and enjoy a few hours of peace and quiet. Teachers who have had practical experience in getting a child ready for school can appreciate what they ask when they urge their pupils to report each session with clean faces and hands, clean clothes, hair combed and teeth clean.

The great trek back to the schoolroom is on and the shouts and laughter will not be distinguishable from those that accompanied the equally great exodus last spring.

Bond Defaulters

MORE THAN TWO BILLION DOLLARS of bonds of foreign countries is in default, out of a total of more than five billions held in the United States.

All Latin-American countries, except Argentina, Uruguay and Guatemala, are in default. All German dollar bonds, including national, state, municipal and corporation issues, are in default. These German debtors cannot use any credit balances held in United States banks, to apply on interest charges, but must pay by marks through Berlin, when and if payments are resumed. Hitler doesn't overlook anything at the controls.

Brazil is in complete default and a few years ago boasted of a century of freedom from default. Mexico is in complete default, and makes bad matters worse by grabbing foreign owned lands and oil properties, valued at a billion dollars and more.

Russia is in complete default on all issues.

Only about four per cent of Canadian dollar bonds, out of a total of one and three-quarter billions, is in default and these are the provincial bonds of Alberta, where a "new deal" was attempted, to bring back prosperity by the sorcery of "social credit" currency and a promise of $25 a month to everybody from the provincial government. Alberta, under a fanatical reform premier, has the distinction of being the first and only Canadian province to default on a bond issue.

Among the European countries giving full service on dollar bonds are little Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Estonia, Lithuania and Finland.

These facts and figures are from the fifth annual report of the Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council. Out of a total of 637 issues of bonds, 275 are listed as in default.

This is the serious situation that confronts United States investors, who have bought the dollar bonds of foreign countries. The enormous load of debt of these European and Latin-American countries, held by their own people, is a story yet to be told. It is reported that such debt in Germany alone is equivalent to twenty-five billions of dollars.

This information, together with the recollection about the big war debt Europe still owes us, is something to be kept in mind if efforts should be made by foreign governments to raise more money in this country for war purposes. Under the present neutrality act, however, belligerents may not float war bonds in this country; and the Johnson act forbids loans to those owing us war debts in arrears.

Include Us Out

WHEN the European propaganda mills are tilted in this direction, seeking to involve the United States in its latest slaughter, Americans owe it to themselves to get damn mad and to engage in some of the uncouth, ungrammatical language Europeans are prone to attach to the lips of the Homo Americanus.

Europeans should be told that when it comes to winning any more wars for them, to include us out.

If the United States again permits itself to be drawn into the gory European mess, the billions of dollars our late allies and enemies have stuck us for will have been lost in vain. For years it has been said that it was a good thing they didn't pay, because it would keep us out of their next war.

But if we cling to the debts by these European nations doesn't keep us out, losing the money was a bad thing, and the American people are indeed the dumbest in the world.

Of course, nobody in the United States except a few perverts would be sorry if the murderous devilry of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin now ended in the trio becoming buzzard bait, but this is a matter Europe ought to be able to arrange without assistance—financial or otherwise—from the United States.

If the democracies of Europe are worth a hoot they will take care of this problem. If any of this walking carrion that terms itself Per Stalin, II Hitler and Comrade Deuce ever starts in this direction, we'll feed them to the buzzards.

But until then, include the United States out!

And even before they begin talking about asking the United States to join the bloody slaughter, Europeans should have the decency to make some reasonable explanation about the twelve billions which they still owe us and which they have repudiated.

Neutrals Upset

TO BE BYSTANDERS encircled by nations which are at one another's throats has been for generations the traditional role of Holland and Switzerland. Centuries ago, the Netherlands and Helvetia were in the path of warring armies of Europe, but during the more recent major conflicts they have been able to preserve the attitude and the privileges of the onlooker. This strange immunity from general carnage has been the bewilderment of historians, who find many and conflicting reasons for the existence of these peaceful islands in a turbulent sea. However, as the latest dispatches indicate, all is not so well as appears on the surface.

The Swiss are mobilizing 100,000 troops as a covering squad for their frontiers. In Switzerland, as in every other nation, troops mean a heavy drain on the country's resources. Already an order has been put into effect forbidding purchase of many foodstuffs, a suggestion of the possibility of a general rationing program. And in Holland also has gone out an order for mobilization, bringing the small standing army to 400,000. The Americans have been warned to leave the country at once.

These two countries continue to maintain their proverbial attitude of strict neutrality, but it is evident that they cannot remain wholly unaffected by war or the threat of war. In such circumstances, the entire organization of these peaceful states undergoes a radical change.

Another Circle

SO we have another wonder gun. The army authorities have demonstrated it before a small party of veterans of the Civil War. Doubtless it gave them quite a thrill.

"It's so simple a baby could operate it," the officer who put on the show remarked. "It's the finest anti-tank weapon in the world—it can't be touched. It will penetrate two-inch armor or a concrete wall two feet thick at 1,500 yards. It will shoot with accuracy for seven miles. It has the highest velocity of any weapon known to the world today—2,600 feet per second. It'll put out twenty-five rounds of ammunition a minute. By pulling a lever, you can swing it freely from side to side and take care of a number of high-speed tanks coming at you at once."

What all that means, of course, is that the fellows whose business it is to circumvent wonder guns have a task. It is to put another inch on the two-inch armor which the wonder gun's projectile can penetrate and add another foot to the two-foot wall. And then there will be another job for the makers of wonder guns. What has been done, therefore, is just to create another of those vicious circles of which we so frequently read.

It Must Cease

SINCE 1930, the rise in federal taxes has been steadier and more precipitate than at any other period in American history. The fiscal burden, in fact, has been almost doubled.

Sad to relate, it would take more than nine and a half billions of dollars to balance the budget under present fiscal conditions. And, despite that alarming state of affairs, the administration keeps clamoring for larger and larger expenditures.

Entirely apart from any question as to the likelihood or possibility of national bankruptcy, it appears that deficit spending must cease if business is to regain the confidence essential to a full flow of capital and a revitalization of investment and productivity.

The Best Side of a Man

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Know how to get on the best side of a man? Ask him to do something for you. Not something enormous. Not something that demands too much of him. Not something you have no right to ask of any man.

But something he can easily grant you, and will willingly do for you. Ask him for that. Ask him, in effect, to give you a portion of himself.

Afterwards he will like you more than he did before.

Do you know why it works out this way? Do you know why he will then think more pleasantly of you? Do you know why YOU feel a friendliness toward a man YOU have helped?

Perhaps I can't set down the relationship that has arisen, in all details, but I can guess at it. . . . You ask me to do something for you and you make me feel useful. I'm something more than nobody; I am able to help another human being. . . . You put yourself under obligations to me and that is not unpleasant. I am a creditor as well as a debtor and I like that.

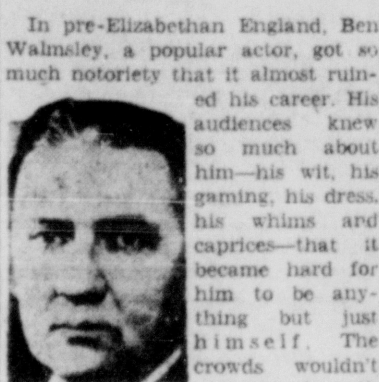

I feel that you will like me because I have helped you. It is good to be liked. . . . And most important of all, you have compelled me to use the best part of myself. I want to do that. I know I should use that side of me more than I do. And helping you warms me and strengthens me and makes me feel better than I know I am. . . . So when you ask me to do something for you, you get on the best side of me.

But don't make the mistake of too obviously paying off the obligation. A man does not wish his friends to be ungrateful, but he hates the thought that you look upon your friendship as a business relationship, in which if he does something for you then you must do something for him. . . . The man who refuses to be "obligated to anybody" prides himself on his sturdy independence, but he flaunts that independence in every man's face and offends the weaker mass of us. We admire him but he dims the flame of our affection by a little.

And do not ask too much or too often. Your friend is glad to be helpful, but he cannot carry you the whole distance. . . . Keep him as your friend, do not ask him to be your meal ticket.

The Human Side Of the News

Edwin C. Hill

In pre-Elizabethan England, Ben Walmesley, a popular actor, got so much notoriety that it almost ruined his career. His audiences knew so much about him—his wit, his dressing, his whims and caprices—that it became hard for him to be anything but just himself. The crowds wouldn't stand for it. "That's no duke," they would yell.

Hollywood is beginning to suffer from the same overlapping of fantasy and reality. I am told that the dilemma appears in an especially aggravated form in the casting for John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath". Here is the difficulty:

A distinguished actress of long experience was tentatively chosen for the role of Ma Joad. She was admirably suited for the part, capable of rising to its high tragedy and pathos. But the trouble is that all America knows of her foreign cars, her Beverly Hills mansion, her Russian wolf hounds, her villa on the Riviera, her jewels and her exotic garden. Too much public familiarity with such detail warps the pattern of celluloid dramaturgy.

As battered old Ma Joad, hands gnarled and knotted by years of drudgery, her face seamed by the unending erosion of worry and toil, climbs into that grotesque old jalopy, there surely will be an obstructive thought of her Panhard car. The Joad shack in the cotton patch will fade into the Tudor-style mansion with its velvet lawns and marble swimming pool. And being goes the dramatic anti-thesis for which the director is striving.

Up Many Times

That, at least, was the conclusion of the producers. They are picking another actress, less known to the public, with an assurance that no knowledge of her butterfly life will interfere with her portrayal of the classically humble and grimly courageous Ma Joad.

The problem has arisen many times in Hollywood in the last year or two. The personality of a star of the first magnitude registers so definitely with the public, his manner of life, his possessions, his marriages, his whims and his hobbies become so widely known that they constitute a reality which is resistant against his creation of illusion.

Fancy, whether bred in the heart or the head, gets mixed up with reality. Hollywood marriages and divorces, particularly, have accentuated this obstacle to the smooth flow of romance on the screen. While the percentage of divorce and remarriage in filmland is, I believe, only slightly greater than that of the rest of the populace, the industry of the gossip columnists, the whispers and rumors which sweep the country from this cave of the winds, the unending flare of lurid publicity—all this builds in the mind of the audience definite ideas about this or that star and stubborn predictions about whom he shouldn't marry. This is important, as a large majority of screen plays are love tales.

Are Piping Down

Both producers and players are piping down on any fanfare attendant to screen romance, marriage or divorce. Recent weddings among the stars have been almost furtively carried through in remote crossroad towns. Publicity about the Hellogabalian chariots and Babylonian gardens of the stars is being discouraged, and the taste, restraint and domesticity in the stellar regions are being emphasized.

All this is something entirely apart from the concern about the traditional high kicking and low thinking at Hollywood. It bears definitely on what seems to be the obvious fact that the more the public knows about a player, or thinks it knows, the more blurred and ineffective will be the screen illusion. In the days of the miracle plays in pre-Elizabethan England, many players lived monastic lives, in keeping with the roles of sacred or sainted personages to which they were assigned. Hollywood might have to become a sort of Chau-

Three Centuries Of a Free Press

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The University Press at Harvard is properly proud of being the first printing establishment in Colonial United States, and the general observance this year of its three hundred anniversary, including the issuance of a special postage stamp next month, naturally allies this nation's continuing development with the extension of the printing press.

Philadelphian historians know the part Adam Ramage and George Clymer of this city had in improving mechanical printing devices, the latter bettering the Washington hand press screw with a system of levers in 1817-34, while, of course, Philadelphia's own Benjamin Franklin, master printer, remains, in every clime and country, a fitting symbol of the power and good fruits inherent in the press.

China was printing from wood blocks as early as 50 B. C., and using movable type in 1041, four centuries before Gutenberg printed his Bible Spain and Switzerland had printing long before William Caxton set up his English press in 1476, and Giovanni Paoletti established a press in Mexico City a full century before Stephen Day and his son began at Cambridge. Printing in this country, like the Republic itself, is modern contrasted to man's ages-old thirst for knowledge.

It is important to note, however, that early America waited only briefly after Jamestown and Plymouth Rock to utilize the press for information, enlightenment, unification and concerted achievements for the public weal. Today, as in 1639, the press remains indispensable to a free and unoppressed America. It is pertinently symbolic of this nation's most zealously guarded traditions.

Morning Motto

Prosperity is only an instrument to be used, not a deity to be worshipped.—CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Central Press Columnist

Adolf Hitler isn't at all popular among Americans who have come in contact with him. In the main these include ambassadorial and consular officials. Now and then one or another of these functionaries has visited the United States on leave during the period of Dr. Fuehrer's incumbency and I've talked with several of them quite recently. One was a relative of mine, who expressed himself to me very freely. Naturally these chaps all have had a vehement "passion for anonymity." If any one of them were quoted by name, Germany would be too bilious for him to go back to while Adolf remains on the job.

But General Field Marshal Hermann Goerring, just appointed head of the ministerial council in defense of the reich, and generally regarded as No. 2 Nazi, is pretty well liked—that is to say, personally, not necessarily politically.

However, Herr Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda minister, usually rated as No. 3 Nazi—until Hitler named Adolf Hess as next in line to Goerring—seems to have even fewer well-posted American friends than Adolf himself. When I asked how it happens that some anti-Nazi German (a Jew, for instance) hasn't already tried to bump the present Fuehrer off, the answer invariably has been that everybody has been afraid Goebbels, instead of Goerring, might succeed him. And it's the consensus that Goebbels would be worse than Hitler.

Hitler a Genius
That Hitler's a downright genius is unexceptionally agreed. The complaint is that, though a genius, he's abnormal, if not actually insane. He's assessed as homicidal in his peculiarities, too. Apparently he isn't companionable, either. He doesn't drink beer, as an orthodox German should. He has no smoking signs stuck up all over his premises. He's a vegetarian.

They say he's abusive in conversation; he raves and rants; he's personally insulting to his visitors. In short, the verdict is that, as an individual, he's a darned sight worse than the ex-kaiser ever was. The Kaiser had some of the superlatives of polite society. Dr. Fuehrer is accused of being an unqualified barbarian—not only in his manners.

Some of the folk I've talked with, who have met both of the two, have compared Hitler with Mussolini. They've concurred that Benito, while a dictator, is a rational, human type of one—a bird who can be talked with reasonably. Not so Adolf, according to these authorities.

Such critics don't believe that Adolf and Benito basically have much in common. They calculate that Benito is pretty tired of Adolf now—that he considers the latter dangerously cuckoo.

Goering a Semi-Good Guy
Marshall Goering is classified as intrinsically a nice German—like our own old-time German-Americans.

He's represented as a "good fellow."

He slushes beer, eats "weenies"—and you like him.

They had sanger-bunds and hand-bunds in those days, and nobody found any fault with 'em—in fact, sympathized with 'em. In those times this country was full of German immigrants who were here because they were in exile to get away from the Fatherland's military conscription. In that era, a fat chance Germany would have had to develop a Nazi-bund in America! Militarism then was what our Germans were dying to get away from.

Marshall Goering, then, is a German we think that we more or less understand.

Not so, as I understand it, Herr Hitler's.

And Herr Goebbels, from all accounts, is as crazy as Herr Hitler, without being a genius also.

Youth Demands An Opportunity

From the Altoona, Pa., Tribune

Two speakers at a Denver welfare conference united in pleading for more attention to young people if prisons are not to be kept filled. They were James J. Johnston, warden at Alcatraz and James Bennett, director of the federal bureau of prisons.

"If we would spend more time and effort and money in the making of our citizens we would not be obliged to spend so much time in attempts toward their remaking," that was Warden Johnston speaking.

"More than half the persons leaving prisons this year will be back again in five years," said Director Bennett.

We well may be alarmed at the crime toll. In spite of the efforts of the Boy Scouts and other welfare agencies, in spite of our schools and churches the problem of youthful crime impends. Some of it, of course, is due to the depression.

It is so easy for a young fellow to associate with improper companions if he is without the scope of the Boy Scout influence or welfare agencies. It is easy for him to become a potential criminal if he has no work to do. The depression is seeing to that—and unless private enterprise is permitted to expand as it should, unless we abandon relief rolls, we can only expect a further demoralizing effect, especially among the young.

It is not sound doctrine to denounce youth as a whole for the sins of a few young people. But conditions are such that the tendency is toward an increase in crime by youth. It is the duty of the adults to watch over adolescence and on every opportunity offer help toward worth-while living.

Factographs

Experts who recently studied 2,500 penitentiary prisoners in Texas said about one-fourth of them have an excellent chance of going straight after their release. They found sixteen "public enemies of the first water."

The new army regulations adopted September 1, 1939, reduce the cadence of marching troops to 120 steps a minute, from the old 120. Reason: soldiers stepped on each other's heels under the old system.

Column Policy Is Laid Down

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Sept. 6.—Writing this column has been a lot of fun. It's going to be less so. It used to be a delight to wind up and take a shot at Honest Harold Ickes. He didn't mind. He had so much ammunition and a longer range than I had. He gleefully used his guns. Then we had lunch together and fought it all over again in good temper.

I can't do that any more. Hon. HUGH S. JOHNSON old is our man on the spot. He is or will be, responsible that supply of our greatest national resources—coal and oil—doesn't break down. I would as soon think of giving him a gun, as I would of tickling a surgeon under the ribs at a critical moment in an operation of the human heart—or pulling a seat-cushion out from under an aviator who is trying to bring his safely down in a line-squall.

Not Eye to Eye

My old friend, the president, I haven't seen eye to eye lately of many things. I have cracked him plenty. He knows how to crack to. He got me into the famous O. Room and went around me as a cooer goes around a barrel. Still the day I reported from West Point as a second lieutenant to that old Indian fighter Greaser Hugh, colonel of the First cavalry—forgot to attend reveille—I had been panned by experts—but new like that. No more. Farewell. Lochaber. The president, Mr. Ickes. Muddum Perkins—ever Tommy to Cork. Leon the Pen and Benny to Cork—all these pet peevs are in the pilot's seat and it is our boat this is tossing.

I have been in positions of great responsibility at critical periods, and have seen others there. I know how minds work at such times. I feel the weight of the happiness of 25,000,000 homes and the peace of mind of 130,000,000 people—and it is all they feel. They may be stupid, unexperienced and inept, but they are putting out the last ounce. They need the respect and confidence of the people they are working for. What is far more important, the people need their freedom from annoyance.

I don't mean that I am going shut my mouth on what I think. My duty to call 'em as I see 'em. That is my job. But I do mean, the president himself suggested, I am going to be far more careful to check facts, to withhold judgment on the motives behind acts, to refrain from too many joyous wild cracks and in my small way hold the hands of every person in public life who is trying to unite us, make us stronger and to keep us out of war.

As to Purchasing

As this column has said always since the argument started, the president is perfectly right in demand for a revision of the Neutrality act to permit all powers we can do so to purchase arms here. The arms embargo didn't spring from any aspect of neutrality—on from a reluctance to deal in dead weapons. But that happens to be un-neutrality. Furthermore, it is unimportant in principle. Export airplanes, we have no weapons to sell, and even as to planes, we shall have demands of our own to our capacity to produce. So let's promptly get the president what he asks on and show a little unity.

As to general policy, this column is going to fight as hard as ever every move to draw us in the direction of taking sides, but it is going to support any move to make us strong and free us out.—Distributed by United Press Syndicate, Inc.

Maryland Farm Musings

From the Extension Service, the University of Maryland.

The University of Maryland Extension Service has a supply of signs warning against the blight of fruit. These signs are designed for posting in packing houses where employees may see them and being mailed out to growers. If you do not receive a set of these signs you may order a set by writing to Extension Service at College Park. There are three signs to a set and several sets may be obtained at one time.

Each year apple growers of the country spend $17,500,000 in control of codling moth which is said to be the greatest amount spent for control of any single pest.

A. F. Vierheller, specialist in horticulture for the University of Maryland Extension Service, says that growers who have apple trees that are developing weak crotch can brace them with water sprouts growing on the main scaffold branches inside of the tree. Set two good water sprouts on opposite branches, bend the sprouts in line with each other, twist them around each other several times, and let them go. In a few years they will graft together and make excellent living braces. They are better than wire braces and will last as long as the tree stands.

Milk Ration
Increases in W. Va.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 6. (AP)—A milk beaker would hold the average Virginian's daily ration of milk, the health department says it is eating.

The state has about 150,000 cows milking about 260,000 gallons of milk a year, officials reported, but only gives West Virginia one-one-hundredth of the nation's supply.

Even at that the milk flow annually would fill a reservoir ninety feet long, ten feet deep and ten wide.

Dr. A. E. McClure, health commissioner, had this to say:

West Virginians consume about 31,400 gallons of pasteurized and 33,000 gallons of raw milk with the greater part of the production going into butter, ice cream, etc.

That makes the per capita consumption about 0.29 pint a day.

Modern Logging Camps Really Modern In Efficiency, Cleanliness and Operation

Cookhouse, left, and hotel, in foreground, at Camp McDonald, the state of Washington's newest and the nation's most modern logging camp.

By GORDON M. QUARNSTROM
Central Press Correspondent

Longview, Wash., Sept. 6 — If you asked a modern girl to go swimming in the bathing garments worn by the belle of 40 years ago, she would look askance, indeed.

Well, the 1939 model logger would look even more askance if you requested him to make himself "to home" in quarters which his father or grandfather would have considered acceptable back in the 1890's.

For the logger is rapidly becoming a gentleman. He is wearing city clothes and playing golf; he reads the daily paper and he often improves on his high school (or even college) education with correspondence courses. And, just as the logger is improving his social status, the camps which are his headquarters while he is in the timber are becoming models of cleanliness and comfort.

Timber Village
Most striking proof of the development of the logging camp is seen in the new operations at McDonald, Wash., where the Weyerhaeuser Timber company is just beginning to cut one of the Pacific northwest's finest remaining stands of Douglas fir.

The casual visitor to Camp McDonald, which the Weyerhaeuser company considers the most modern in the nation, might think he was in a thriving village, instead of the center of a gigantic woods operation.

Headquarters camp, for example, is on a well-drained slope and has sufficient space for baseball and other sports. The office building is heated by an automatic hot-air furnace and is air-conditioned.

The men, instead of staying in bunkhouses, live in a hotel, which provides a room for each pair of loggers. The hotel also is heated automatically, contains a large recreation room and is artistically finished. There are convenient shower baths, washrooms and lavatory facilities.

Living quarters in the woods are provided by small buildings, each with accommodations for eight men and each divided into two sleeping compartments. Each man has his own locker, and a drying room is provided to care for wet clothing. No longer must the loggers live in a smelly and badly-lighted structure, with bunks strewn around the sides for 30 or 40 men and with steaming clothes hung around the big wood burner to dry.

The cookhouses at McDonald are models of efficiency, equipped with latest type stoves and fine refrigerators. And the men are provided with chairs with backs, in place of the old wooden benches or stools formerly used in the mess halls.

Camp McDonald is named after the general superintendent, Ronald McDonald, and embodies all the ideas which McDonald and his veteran assistants have accumulated as they have come across the continent, from Maine to Washington.

Good Investment
The modern camp is considered a good investment, for the logging companies are learning that good camps mean better and more satisfied workmen. The danger of strikes is lessened. The initial cost is more than repaid in increased production and efficiency.

So, don't be surprised if some day you find loggers living in ever more sumptuous surroundings, each with his own string of polo ponies and with a valet to lay out his working clothes.

Far-fetched? Yes, but the ideas of air conditioning and meals prepared by dietetics experts would have sounded even more ridiculous to the horny-handed, rip-roaring woodsmen of past decades, woodsmen who slept in vermin-infested bunks and found most of their recreation in gambling, tremendous drinking and even more tremendous brawls.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Forcing freesias for winter bloom

Freesias which are to be forced for winter bloom indoors must be prepared in September or early October, for they require quite a long season of growth.

Freesias are deep-rooted and do not like to be planted in shallow pots. Since they make top and root growth at the same time, they do not require being placed in the dark after planting.

Plant the freesia corms 1/2 to 1 inch deep, and 2 inches apart, in a deep pot, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. After planting the freesias can be kept in a cold frame, or just out of doors, but they must be brought inside before frosts come. Indoors, place them in a sunny window. They like to be well-watered at all times.

Nazi Police Adopt A Stern Measure

Hanover, Germany—Jay walkers of this city seem to have been unimpressed by a fine of one mark, approximately forty cents, imposed upon them by parading cops, for their number increased steadily, according to the local chief of police. Police authorities therefore decided to adopt more rigid measures. Any pedestrian caught violating traffic rules must henceforth attend Sunday classes of instruction on "rules of the road" at police headquarters. To increase the "educational effect" of these lessons, the offenders are compelled to pay for their instruction at the rate of one mark per lesson.

Story of a Foreman And Two Workers

Miami, Fla. (AP)—The recent approach of a tropical storm caused a hurricane veteran to tell this story, unsupported by names, of a happening during a previous threat. "Go back on the job and nail every loose thing down," a foreman told a construction worker. "The other fellows are at it already. There's a storm coming and we don't want things to blow around." The man hurried to the spot where he had left his tools. He grabbed his hammer—but another workman already had been there. With a nail through its handle, the hammer was nailed down tight.

When you go to college for the first time, remember that good manners are most important in creating a good impression and making you popular. Think of the other fellow and his feelings before you blurt out what first comes into your mind.

Wash Away Oily Hair Troubles

By HELEN FOLLETT

LOUDEST among the beauty wailers are the girls with oily hair. They complain eternally, make a big fuss. Sometimes over-active sebaceous glands are bothering the silky shafts; often the oiliness is the penalty a girl pays for giving herself a casual half-hearted shampoo.

If she rubs the bar of soap over her brain mat, she can be sure that particles of soap will cling so closely that rinsing will not remove them. Some soaps are desirable for the skin, not for the hair; they don't make a live crackling suds which is necessary to combat oils, dead skin scales and dust that the pretty mop has collected.

Let Wailing Winnie place a small bar of soap in a quart mason jar, fill the jar with boiling water, let stand three days before using. She can then half fill a cup with the solution, add as much hot water, have a perfect shampoo medium.

There should be three soapings, as many rinsings with a bath spray and a strong current of water. Brisk friction is necessary. If the comb and brush show a gray deposit, the soap has not been removed. Hair, when properly laundered, will not be oily before a fortnight, if then, no matter how busy sebaceous glands may be.

Narcissus is a delightful perfume that has a haunting fragrance. Jasmine is another elusive scent that is beloved by the fluffy girl. Mimosa is coming to the fore after a long absence, as is violet. Gardenia is always good. Lilac

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Her Husband Accused Her Falsely

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a married woman with two small children—6 and 8 years old. My husband got a divorce by false accusations, saying that I misbehaved while he was away on a business trip, which of course was not true.

I still care a great deal for him and as I don't like to have the children grow up without a father's influence, I should like very much to get him back. My relations and my friends say that I should be glad to be rid of a man who has treated me so cruelly, but in spite of everything I still love him. It was only bad influences and drink that led him away in the first place. Do you know of any way I can get him to return to us? The little boy of 8 talks about him a great deal and we all want him to come home.

PATIENT.

Your signature explains your attitude toward your husband, my dear, and there is nothing more to be said about it. When a woman really wants back a man who has treated her so badly, it's no one's business but her own. You and the children might appeal to him and say that you still love him and would welcome him back. If he hasn't married in the meantime, he may be willing to come back. Weak men, who rush away from wife and children, under the influence of liquor and unscrupulous friends, often discover their mistake and, like the wandering cat, are glad to get back to the fireside again.

you like or you don't; it is a perfume that appeals to the male sex for some reason or other. Mignonette reminds one of an old fashioned garden. Fashionable scents that take the phrail sex by storm are blends. They carry crazy names, so nobody knows what's in them. One after another they have a wave of popularity. Cultivate a fastidious nose and you'll select the right one.

THE DOUBLE SQUEEZE NAMED. AS it is, because of the number of opponents squeezed, two of them, this play is sometimes incorrectly called the triple squeeze because it squeezes the opponents in three different suits besides the one on which they discard. In basic principle, it combines a forward squeeze against the first opponent to play to the crucial trick with a backward squeeze against the other opponent. Both try to guard one suit, but one of them has to guard a single card in another suit and the other has to try to guard a single card in still a third suit.

drugstore. I believe I'd let the matter rest there. A girl of your age is pretty young to accept the responsibility of mothering a small child, and if you did accept, you would want to make a good job of it, wouldn't you?

It seems to me you would be a great deal happier if you married someone with whom you could enjoy your youth, and not begin married life with so many duties right at the beginning. Why try to have an understanding, when he seems content to join the boys of his acquaintance?

Again the Green-Eyed Monster

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Mine in another of those eternal triangles. Two of us are in love with the same girl. We all graduated from high school last June, and this other chap and I took her to all the school dances, concerts, plays, and other social activities in the school. I'm to enter college this fall, but my rival was lucky enough to get a job and has given up the college idea. Now if I go away, I'm afraid it will be a case of "out of sight, out of mind," and the other fellow will get the girl. How can I keep this girl interested in me? Can you suggest something I can give her to remember me by—a ring, perhaps—not a diamond, of course—or some other gift which she can keep to remind her of me? My folks won't hear of quitting college. We're all 17 and 18.

JEALOUS

You're very frank about admitting you're jealous of this other fellow. But I can't see why you, on the way to a university career, should want to bind this girl to you by keeping her from receiving the attention of the rival. I seem to me, if you give her a ring (although it's not a diamond), you would put yourself in a false position.

If you want to give her something to remember you by, why not give her a writing portfolio, and tell her you hope it will suggest that she will sometimes write you a letter.

Wash Away Oily Hair Troubles

By HELEN FOLLETT

LOUDEST among the beauty wailers are the girls with oily hair. They complain eternally, make a big fuss. Sometimes over-active sebaceous glands are buttering the silky shafts; often the oiliness is the penalty a girl pays for giving herself a casual half-hearted shampoo.

If she rubs the bar of soap over her brain mat, she can be sure that particles of soap will cling so closely that rinsing will not remove them. Some soaps are desirable for the skin, not for the hair; they don't make a live crackling suds which is necessary to combat oils, dead skin scales and dust that the pretty mop has collected.

Let Wailing Winnie place a small bar of soap in a quart mason jar, fill the jar with boiling water, let stand three days before using. She can then half fill a cup with the solution, add as much hot water, have a perfect shampoo medium.

There should be three soapings, as many rinsings with a bath spray and a strong current of water. Brisk friction is necessary. If the comb and brush show a gray deposit, the soap has not been removed. Hair, when properly laundered, will not be oily before a fortnight, if then, no matter how busy sebaceous glands may be.

Narcissus is a delightful perfume that has a haunting fragrance. Jasmine is another elusive scent that is beloved by the fluffy girl. Mimosa is coming to the fore after a long absence, as is violet. Gardenia is always good. Lilac

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Her Husband Accused Her Falsely

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a married woman with two small children—6 and 8 years old. My husband got a divorce by false accusations, saying that I misbehaved while he was away on a business trip, which of course was not true.

I still care a great deal for him and as I don't like to have the children grow up without a father's influence, I should like very much to get him back. My relations and my friends say that I should be glad to be rid of a man who has treated me so cruelly, but in spite of everything I still love him. It was only bad influences and drink that led him away in the first place. Do you know of any way I can get him to return to us? The little boy of 8 talks about him a great deal and we all want him to come home.

PATIENT.

Your signature explains your attitude toward your husband, my dear, and there is nothing more to be said about it. When a woman really wants back a man who has treated her so badly, it's no one's business but her own. You and the children might appeal to him and say that you still love him and would welcome him back. If he hasn't married in the meantime, he may be willing to come back. Weak men, who rush away from wife and children, under the influence of liquor and unscrupulous friends, often discover their mistake and, like the wandering cat, are glad to get back to the fireside again.

THE DOUBLE SQUEEZE

NAMED AS it is, because of the number of opponents squeezed, two of them, this play is sometimes incorrectly called the triple squeeze because it squeezes the opponents in three different suits besides the one on which they discard. In basic principle, it combines a forward squeeze against the first opponent to play to the crucial trick with a backward squeeze against the other opponent. Both try to guard one suit, but one of them has to guard a single card in another suit and the other card in a third suit.

drugstore, I believe I'd let the matter rest there. A girl of your age is pretty young to accept the responsibility of mothering a small child, and if you did accept, you would want to make a good job of it, wouldn't you?

It seems to me you would be a great deal happier if you married someone with whom you could enjoy your youth, and not begin married life with so many duties right at the beginning. Why try to have an understanding, when he seems content to join the boys of his acquaintance?

Again the Green-Eyed Monster

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Mine in another of those eternal triangles. Two of us are in love with the same girl. We all graduated from high school last June, and this other chap and I took her to all the school dances, concerts, plays, and other social activities in the school.

I'm to enter college this fall, but my rival was lucky enough to get a job and has given up the college idea. Now if I go away, I'm afraid it will be a case of "out of sight, out of mind," and the other fellow will get the girl. How can I keep this girl interested in me? Can you suggest something I can give her to remember me by—a ring, perhaps—not a diamond, of course—or some other gift which she can keep to remind her of me? My folks won't hear of quitting college. We're all 17 and 18.

JEALOUS

You're very frank about admitting you're jealous of this other fellow. But I can't see why you, on the way to a university career, should want to bind this girl to you by keeping her from receiving the attention of the rival. I seem to me, if you give her a ring (although it's not a diamond), you would put yourself in a false position.

If you want to give her something to remember you by, why not give her a writing portfolio, and tell her you hope it will suggest that she will sometimes write you a letter.

greater use of water to allay coal dust.

A major result of regular wetting down of all parts of a mine, the bureau said, would be reduction in the hazards of explosion.

Moreover, it continued in a report on a study of the use of water in mines, sprinkling to settle the coal would improve health of miners and increase their efficiency.

Additional arguments — from the economic standpoint — advanced by the bureau, included assertions of use of water would prolong the effective life of rock-dust, spread through most mines to prevent dust explosions, and improve visibility, thus decreasing accidents.

Water Recommended
The bureau emphasized that it recommended the use of water — a practice followed in many mines and required by state law in some western fields not as a substitute for rock-dusting to curtail explosion hazards.

"Water is recommended," the bureau's report continued, "as a supplement to general rock-dusting." "As such it reduces the quantity of dust thrown in to the air during mining operations; consequently, in the event of an explosion the likelihood of dust being thrown into suspension is greatly reduced.

"The effect of coal dust on the health of miners has not been determined conclusively, but the belief at present is that any dust breathed for a long enough time in large enough quantities is likely to be detrimental to health. During investigations of dust conditions in coal mines it has been observed that inhaling dry dust apparently increases the tendency to colds and bronchial irritations, resulting in persistent coughing that may last for months or even years."

Several Factors Involved
"An increase of approximately ten per cent in the efficiency of workers is claimed where water is used to allay dust in some mechanized mines in the midwestern states. Much of this is probably due to better visibility, but other important factors are the lessened discomfort when air-borne dust is reduced and eyes, ears, noses, throat and lungs are freed of the hazard that accompany the dust x x x.

"The cleaner atmosphere . . . in mines employing water in the various operations unquestionably improves the morale of workmen; they are likely to be more contented with working conditions, and as a consequence labor turn-over probably will be lessened.

Used Many Years
"Water has been used to allay dust in some bituminous-coal mines of Pennsylvania and West Virginia for more than a quarter of a century." The report continued.

"The first pipe systems were installed about 1912 to reduce the coal-dust explosion hazard by wetting coal surfaces only, but after it had been installed it was found that the health of the miners also was improved.

"Consequently, when rock-dusting was introduced as an improved explosion-prevention method, most of the mines then using water retained the water system for their health benefits and as an additional explosion-prevention method.

More Comfortable
"The consensus of numerous miners in mines where water is used to allay dust is that they are more comfortable during loading; the water helps to clear the smoke from the air after blasting, making it easier on their throats and ears; and that they would much rather work in such a mine than in one where no water is used. x x x

"If the quantity of water used is not known it is difficult to estimate the cost of water for allaying dust in bituminous mines, but the upkeep of a system, once installed, has been estimated at one cent and one-half cents per ton of coal. Companies using this system in Pennsylvania and West Virginia feel that the cost is more than offset by the decreased explosion and health hazards and reduced labor turnover which are due largely to the better morale of employees x x x

"Increased interest in water being manifested by many mine operators in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and it is expected that the number of mines using either portable tanks with mining machines or installing complete pipe-line systems will increase."

Radio Schedule Is Interrupted By War News

Good News Variety Show Returns on Blue Network

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

New York, Sept. 6 — These being exciting days overseas, about all that can be said in advance about the next day's schedule is that the radio will be in operation more or less sandwiching in regular programs between pickups from Europe, or about Europe.

Listed a head of time the only overseas program is the regular European discussion period on WJZ-NBC at 6:45, and that may be changed.

Otherwise, WJZ-NBC expects at 8 the return of the Good News variety show, with Walter Huston as master of ceremonies, with Fanny Brice, Connie Boswell, Meredith Willson's orchestra and others.

WABC-CBS and its Columbia Workshop has a revival of Norman Corwin's aerial bombing poem, "They Fly Through the Air With The Greatest of Ease," now regarded as a radio classic.

WJZ-NBC has arranged to start a new South American comment series by Edward Tomlinson at 5:15, he to talk from Buenos Aires.

North Carolina Vs. Virginia

Richmond, Va. (AP)—When W. T. Penner, chairman of the North Carolina World's Fair commission, picked up a booklet on Virginia attractions and found three Carolina Girls—one of them Mrs. Penner—gracing the cover, he chided Virginia for luring visitors with out-of-state beauties.

N. Clarence Smith, chairman of the Virginia conservation commission, expressing doubt that "these North Carolinians ever showed the pep and enthusiasm in their own state that they are showing in Virginia," invited Penner to follow his wife's example and run up to Virginia for "a wonderful time."

The hostess who is rather new at the business of entertaining should remember that entertaining after the theater or informal dances should be very informal, with food that is neither too rich to cause indigestion nor too heavy.

Coal Mine Is Much Safer, Bureau Holds Water Will Reduce the Hazard of Explosion

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—A wet mine is the safer mine, the Bureau of Mines reports in recommending greater use of water to allay coal dust.

A major result of regular wetting down of all parts of a mine, the bureau said, would be reduction in the hazards of explosion.
Moreover, it continued in a report on a study of the use of water in mines, sprinkling to settle the coal would improve health of miners and increase their efficiency.
Additional arguments — from the economic standpoint — advanced by the bureau, included assertions use of water would prolong the effective life of rock-dust, spread through most mines to prevent dust explosions, and improve visibility, thus decreasing accidents.

Water Recommended
The bureau emphasized that it recommended the use of water — a practice followed in many mines and required by state law in some western fields not as a substitute for rock-dusting to curtail explosion hazards.

"Water is recommended," the bureau's report continued, "as a supplement to general rock-dusting."
"As such it reduces the quantity of dust thrown in to the air during mining operations; consequently, in the event of an explosion the likelihood of dust being thrown into suspension is greatly reduced."

"The effect of coal dust on the health of miners has not been determined conclusively, but the belief at present is that any dust breathed for a long enough time in large enough quantities is likely to be detrimental to health. During investigations of dust conditions in coal mines it has been observed that inhaling dry dust apparently increases the tendency to colds and bronchial irritations, resulting in persistent coughing that may last for months or even years."

Several Factors Involved
"An increase of approximately ten per cent in the efficiency of workers is claimed where water is used to allay dust in some mechanized mines in the midwestern states. Much of this is probably due to better visibility, but other important factors are the lessened discomfort when air-borne dust is reduced and eyes, ears, noses, throat and lungs are freed of the hazard that accompany the dust x x x."

"The cleaner atmosphere . . . in mines employing water in the various operations unquestionably improves the morale of workmen; they are likely to be more contented with working conditions, and as a consequence labor turn-over probably will be lessened."

Used Many Years
"Water has been used to allay dust in some bituminous-coal mines of Pennsylvania and West Virginia for more than a quarter of a century."

"The first pipe systems were installed about 1912 to reduce the coal-dust explosion hazard by wetting coal surfaces only, but after it had been installed it was found that the health of the miners also was improved."

"Consequently, when rock-dusting was introduced as an improved explosion-prevention method, most of the mines then using water retained the water system for their health benefits and as an additional explosion-prevention method."

More Comfortable
"The consensus of numerous miners in mines where water is used to allay dust is that they are more comfortable during loading; the water helps to clear the smoke from the air after blasting, making it easier on their throats and ears; and that they would much rather work in such a mine than in one where no water is used. x x x"

"If the quantity of water used is not known it is difficult to estimate the cost of water for allaying dust in bituminous mines, but the upkeep of a system, once installed, has been estimated at one cent and one-half cents per ton of coal. Companies using this system in Pennsylvania and West Virginia feel that the cost is more than offset by the decreased explosion and health hazards and reduced labor turnover which are due largely to the better morale of employees x x x"

"Increased interest in watering is being manifested by many mine operators in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and it is expected that the number of mines using either portable tanks with mining machines or installing complete pipe-line systems will increase."

Radio Schedule Is Interrupted By War News Good News Variety Show Returns on Blue Network

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

New York, Sept. 6 — These being exciting days overseas, about all that can be said in advance about the next day's schedule is that the radio will be in operation more or less sandwiching in regular programs between pickups from Europe, or about Europe.

Listed a head of time the only overseas program is the regular European discussion period on WJZ-NBC at 6:45, and that may be changed.

Otherwise, WEAF-NBC expects at 8 the return of the Good News variety show, with Walter Huston as master of ceremonies, with Fanny Brice, Connie Boswell, Meredith Willson's orchestra and others.
WABC-CBS and its Columbia Workshop has a revival of Norman Corwin's aerial bombing poem, "They Fly Through the Air With The Greatest of Ease," now regarded as a radio classic.

WJZ-NBC has arranged to start a new South American comment series by Edward Tomlinson at 5:15, he to talk from Buenos Aires.

Bad Eyesight Is Often Cause of School Failure

Need of Periodic Examination Is Stressed by Physician

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Despite the efforts made by public health agencies and other organizations, parents are not yet aware of the need of periodic examination of children's eyes.

Children of school age are constantly found to have visual defects, gross enough to render them incapable of succeeding in their courses. The children do not complain. When they enter school, they are for the first time made to do close visual work. In their innocence they assume that if the letters in the book are blurred, that is the way they should be and that every other pupil's book has blurred letters also.

It is therefore not unnatural that the best meaning parents should be bewildered when their children are reported as failing in their studies and that they should resent the suggestion that the children are lacking in intelligence. They think and properly that the child at home is intelligent, and blame the school authorities for the failure of the child to advance.

Another Difficulty
Another difficulty familiar to school authorities is that when the suggestion is made that a child needs glasses, the parents say, "He got glasses a few years ago." As the child develops the eyes develop also, and the glasses that might have been proper "a few years ago" are not necessarily adequate now. Then it depends on who fitted the glasses "a few years ago." I feel that for a child's eyes the best oculist is none too good.

Oculists agree that the small errors are the most important to correct because a child's eyes are always attempting to over-correct these small errors. They succeed in doing so but only at the expense of strain, which means headache and general discomfort. Good vision is one thing, sustained good vision with comfort is quite another.

The two common abnormalities of the eyes in children are astigmatism and muscle imbalance. Both can be compensated, but at a cost of discomfort.

The short-sighted child presents no mystery. Anybody can be convinced that he needs glasses; so with the child with a plain squint. But the child with a small amount of astigmatism or slight muscle imbalance can correct, and does involuntarily correct these defects, and the condition passes unrecognized.

Astigmatism is a refractive error depending on the proper curve of the cornea. For perfect vision the cornea should be a perfect curve. Then all the rays of light would be refracted at the same focus. Such eyes are never found. We all have a certain amount of astigmatism. Just when it gets abnormal do we get symptoms. Whenever vision causes discomfort, it needs correction.

I think this point is not as trite as it sounds. Every astigmatism does not need correction. Our instruments for measuring visual defects are far more accurate than they need to be and many children are unnecessarily fitted with glasses.

J. P.: (1) Is short-wave diathermy recommended for arthritis? (2) What causes lumps under the skin in arthritis? (3) Are these lumps ever pre-cancerous? (4) Does arthritis of the shoulder belong to either atrophic or hypertrophic arthritis group?

J. L. D.: "Is there a cure for sugar diabetes? Please explain symptoms of the disease. What is the diet?"

Answer—Diabetes can be controlled by diet and insulin. The symptoms are due to lack of utilization of sugar in the body. Treatment is to cut down on the intake of sugar-producing foods—bread, sugar, fruits, desserts, milk.

Ambitious Coal Miners Use Bull for Hauling

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 6. (P)—Numerous Logan coal producers bring coal from the depths by a mechanism in which a "bull wheel" is an indispensable part; but the Yeager brothers didn't have the wheel.

They did have the bull, however, and their production record shows they managed to get along.

The Yeagers—Harry and Lloyd—opened a truck mine on their farm in 1937. Lacking capital to purchase a mule, they at first pushed the cars from the mine themselves, until one of them struck on the idea of harnessing their yearling bull.

An old horse collar, a couple of trace lines and a makeshift bridle constituted the harness, and the brothers now estimate the bull has hauled nearly 1,000 tons of coal.

Million Children Are Subject to Mental Break

But Most of Them Can Be Saved from Such Catastrophe

By GARRY C. MYERS, P.H.D.

According to the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, there are now a million children in our public schools who will have a mental breakdown at some time during their life.

However, mental hygienists maintain that most of these children could be saved from this catastrophe if their parents and teachers were to provide a more calm, serene, and poised home and school life; if adults learned to manage themselves better and to cultivate themselves better mental health; if, moreover, parents and teachers would acquire enough wisdom and skill in guiding growing children.

Mental Health Defined
That person has good mental health who manages himself well, gets along agreeably with other people and seldom worries. He makes his feelings his friends, and not his enemies. He builds in himself those habits he knows to be most useful to him as an individual and as a member of society.

He works hard when he works, and plays hard when he plays. Others like to work with him and play with him. When he has a job, he does it wholeheartedly, and never seeks excuses to postpone it or to run away from it. He has the courage to face tasks he knows he ought to face. He is not a quitter or a coward.

He doesn't try to fool himself or others, nor does he pity himself. He is ever ready to accept the consequences of his own shortcomings, and does not blame others for his failures.

Not A Question of Being Smart

Mental health is not a measure of how smart a person is. Some very brilliant persons become mentally sick, and some rather stupid persons enjoy excellent mental health. But it is a measure of how well a person uses his mind and emotions to get along with himself and others. A better word for mental health might be emotional health.

While this column has not been labeled "mental health," one of its major aims is just that, as you can see. For building good mental health, we must begin with the

Bad Eyesight Is Often Cause of School Failure

Need of Periodic Examination Is Stressed by Physician

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Despite the efforts made by public health agencies and other organizations, parents are not yet aware of the need of periodic examination of children's eyes.

Children of school age are constantly found to have visual defects, gross enough to render them incapable of succeeding in their courses. The children do not complain. When they enter school, they are for the first time made to do close visual work. In their innocence they assume that if the letters in the book are blurred, that is the way they should be and that every other pupil's book has blurred letters also.

It is therefore not unnatural that the best meaning parents should be bewildered when their children are reported as failing in their studies and that they should resent the suggestion that the children are lacking in intelligence. They think and properly, that the child at home is intelligent, and blame the school authorities for the failure of the child to advance.

Another Difficulty

Another difficulty familiar to school authorities is that when the suggestion is made that a child needs glasses, the parents say, "He got glasses a few years ago." As the child develops the eyes develop also, and the glasses that might have been proper "a few years ago" are not necessarily adequate now. Then it depends on who fitted the glasses "a few years ago." I feel that for a child's eyes the best oculist is none too good.

Oculists agree that the small errors are the most important to correct because a child's eyes are always attempting to over-correct these small errors. They succeed in doing so but only at the expense of strain, which means headache and general discomfort. Good vision is one thing, sustained good vision with comfort is quite another.

The two common abnormalities of the eyes in children are astigmatism and muscle imbalance. Both can be compensated, but at a cost of discomfort.

The short-sighted child presents no mystery. Anybody can be convinced that he needs glasses; so with the child with a plain squint. But the child with a small amount of astigmatism or slight muscle imbalance can correct, and does involuntarily correct these defects, and the condition passes unrecognized.

Astigmatism is a refractive error depending on the proper curve of the cornea. For perfect vision the cornea should be a perfect curve. Then all the rays of light would be refracted at the same focus. Such eyes are never found. We all have a certain amount of astigmatism. Just when it gets abnormal do we get symptoms. When vision causes discomfort, it needs correction.

I think this point is not as trite as it sounds. Every astigmatism does not need correction. Our instruments for measuring visual defects are far more accurate than they need to be and many children are unnecessarily fitted with glasses.

J. F.: "(1) Is short-wave diathermy recommended for arthritis? (2) What causes lumps under the skin in arthritis? (3) Are these lumps ever pre-cancerous? (4) Does bursitis of the shoulder belong to either atrophic or hypertrophic arthritis group?"

J. L. D.: "Is there a cure for sugar diabetes? Please explain symptoms of the disease. What is the diet?"

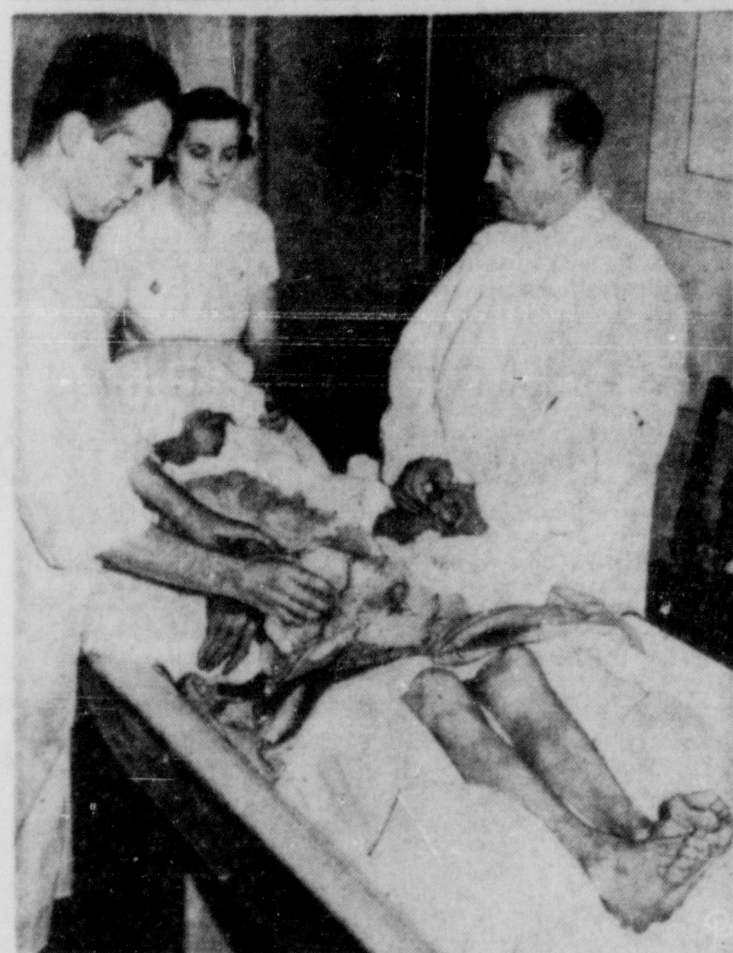

Answer—Diabetes can be controlled by diet and insulin. The symptoms are due to lack of utilization of sugar in the body. Treatment is to cut down on the intake of sugar-producing foods—bread, sugar, fruits, desserts, milk.

Steam Roller Backs Up

Narrows, Va., (AP)—Beverly Coburn and Ruth Mullins had a quick-thinking steam-roller operator to thank when their tumble from a bicycle brought them nothing worse than superficial injuries.

Knocked from their bicycle by a dog that was yapping at the engine, the children fell into the path of the steam roller. Operator Walter Bowles swung his gear lever into reverse, stopping the roller inches from the sprawling youngsters.

Ambitious Coal Miners Use Bull for Hauling

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 6. (AP)—Numerous Logan coal producers bring coal from the depths by a mechanism in which a "bull wheel" is an indispensable part; but the Yeager brothers didn't have the wheel.

They did have the bull, however, and their production record shows they've managed to get along.

The Yeagers—Harry and Lloyd—opened a truck mine on their farm in 1937. Lacking capital to purchase a mule, they at first pushed the cars from the mine themselves, until one of them struck on the idea of harnessing their yearling bull.

An old horse collar, a couple of trace lines and a makeshift bridle constituted the harness, and the brothers now estimate the bull has hauled nearly 1,000 tons of coal.

Million Children Are Subject to Mental Break

But Most of Them Can Be Saved from Such Catastrophe

By GARRY C. MYERS, P.H.D.

According to the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, there are now a million children in our public schools who will have a mental breakdown at some time during their life.

However, mental hygienists maintain that most of these children could be saved from this catastrophe if their parents and teachers were to provide a more calm, serene, and poised home and school life; if adults learned to manage themselves better and to cultivate in themselves better mental health; if, moreover, parents and teachers would acquire enough wisdom and skill in guiding growing children.

Mental Health Defined
That person has good mental health who manages himself well, gets along agreeably with other people and seldom worries. He makes his feelings his friends, and not his enemies. He builds in himself those habits he knows to be most useful to him as an individual and as a member of society.

He works hard when he works, and plays hard when he plays. Others like to work with him and play with him. When he has a job, he does it wholeheartedly, and never seeks excuses to postpone it or to run away from it. He has the courage to face tasks he knows he ought to face. He is not a quitter or a coward.

He doesn't try to fool himself or others, nor does he pity himself. He is ever ready to accept the consequences of his own shortcomings, and does not blame others for his failures.

Not A Question of Being Smart

Mental health is not a measure of how smart a person is. Some very brilliant persons become mentally sick, and some rather stupid persons enjoy excellent mental health. But it is a measure of how well a person uses his mind and emotions to get along with himself and others. A better word for mental health might be emotional health.

While this column has not been labeled "mental health," one of its major aims is just that, as you can see. For building good mental health, we must begin with the

Reds Divide Pair with Pittsburgh Pirates

Add Half Game to Lead as Cards Bow to Chicago's Cubs

Success Win In Eleventh When Cincinnati Defense Falters

Readers Win Second on Werber's Double in Tenth Frame

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6. (P)—Recovering from a jittery start in which they made five errors the league leading Cincinnati Reds managed to split a double header with Pittsburgh today and increased their lead to five and one-half games. The Pirates scored four runs on errors by the Reds to win the first contest in 11 innings 5 to 4. Cincinnati took the second game 4 to 3 when Billy Werber's easy double to short took a bad hop the tenth inning and went for a double, scoring Billy Myers from second.

After catcher Willard McKee's error dropped Paul Waner's foul in the first inning of the first game, Waner and Arky Vaughan singled, Johnny Rizzo doubled, Elbie Fletcher doubled and Andy Handley singled to score three runs. Cincinnati had scored one in the first and added three in the second.

Chuck Klein, pinch-hitting in the fifth for Pittsburgh, doubled and scored on Paul Waner's infield single and a wild throw by Lonnie Smith to tie up the game.

Benny Johnson, fourth Red hurler, passed Ray Mueller in the eighth. Waner singled to right for a third hit and when Eddie Joost played Ivan Goodman's peg wild throw scored the winning run.

Winners Place Davis Cup Beyond Reach of U-Boats

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)
New York, Sept. 6.—There is one way Germany can still win the Davis cup. Having failed to land the trophy by hook, crook, and ambush, she might possibly sail up along side the boat which carries the challenge back to Australia and take it in straight sets, over the rail.

There is even a chance that Japan, which defaulted from Davis cup play this year, may change her mind and get back in the competition, too, in which case the winner of the cup would be the first gunboat to pull alongside.

This system has its merits. It does away with tennis players all together, and, say what you will, that's a step forward. It does away with the price of balls, racquets, nets, and turf. In fact, the scheme is so sensible that Mr. Harry Hopman, captain of the winning Australian team and champion of the world cup, has just about decided not to tempt Germany and Japan too strongly.

Cup and Sauer In Vault?
"They tell me the Germans have a very good underwater Davis cup squad this year," says Mr. Hopman. "If we take the cup along with us on the boat back to Australia next week, we will practically be putting it in play again, and I hate to think of the good work of Quist and Bromwich going to waste. Having won the cup once already, we prefer not to lose it through a port-hole."

"Therefore we plan to leave both cup and sauer in a vault in this country, to be called for later. The Americans assure us that the check will be redeemed. In fact, Captain Pate, of the American team, tells me that we will save a lot of time and money in haulage and freightage by leaving the cup, because the Americans are sure to win it right back the next time they play."

"There may be something in what he says, and there may not be. On the whole," says Mr. Hopman, "I believe I will put an end to Davis cup competition for the year by banking the silverware on the spot where we won it. I hope and trust we'll be back for it later."

There is much to be said for the method of winning sports championships on the high seas. If Joe Louis, for instance, could be hired aboard a ship, shallop, skiff, dory, or canoe sailing through U-boat territory, Germany would lose no time in regaining the world's heavyweight title in one round at most. They could probably regain Joe at the same time, but the chances are that the German navy, being a frugal outfit, would be satisfied to take the title and leave Joe treading water.

Louis Now Shuts Water
Notified of this possibility, Louis promptly moved his training quarters twenty feet farther back from Lake Erie and shot an apprehensive glance at Lake Michigan over his shoulder. They are not going to get Joseph close to any kind of water till after his fight with Robin Pastor this month. If Louis doesn't see to that, Mike Jacobs will.

"Shut off all faucets," promoter Jacobs wired to the Louis training camp. "Take no baths, and confine yourself to booze without chasers till further notice."

These instructions will be followed to the letter, if somebody can produce a letter.

Speaking of heavyweight champions, the career of Max Schmeling, German's titleholder and two-time Nordic hope, seems to be racing to a sad conclusion. Beaten unmercifully by Louis last year and scowled upon by his Fuehrer in consequence, Max now loses his last consolation—a life of peace and forgetting on the big estate he loved at home.

Schmeling holds a commission in the German reservists. By this time, he is probably in the lines, front or rear, east or west, with his proud acres liable to destruction by tax or bombardment or both. The future seems to hold nothing for him. At worst, his fate will be grim. At best, it will be drab and profitless.

This fellow's life was always touched with bitterness and disappointment. He wanted things badly—prizes, titles, and glory—and when he won them by hard, sweating, tight-fisted application that left him no time for rest and pleasure, they turned to ashes in his hands.

He was — is — a slow man with a dollar, and he took much abuse for this. Like everyone whose ways seem grasping and selfish, however, he saw a goal before him and cared little or nothing for what the world said while he pursued it. Schmeling, unhappily, was one of those men for whom the goal remains at a distance. Every victory he scored was a defeat.

This is his last fight — and the curse of futility still rides hard on his back.

Tunnelton Ten Triumphs
Tunnelton, W. Va., Sept. 6.—The Tunnelton recreational golf ball team, under the direction of Tom Pat Keener, won a double header from Newburg Monday. The first game was scored 8 to 5. Tunnelton and the last game, 25 to 0. Tunnelton Batteries for the local team were Gordon and Messenger.

Shamrock A. C. To Sponsor Amateur Show on Sept. 18

DiUbaldo-Mickey Moore and Parker-Hillegas May Top Show

The Shamrock A. C. will sponsor its fourth amateur boxing show of the year Monday evening, Sept. 18, at 8:30 p. m. At the State Armory. Featuring batlers from the Central City A. C. against boys from this section.

Bill Niland, promoter for the Shamrock Club, announced that he has hopes of matching Tony DiUbaldo, Devon A. C. slugger, with Mickey Moore of the Central City, Pa. team. Niland has not yet contacted DiUbaldo but was given assurance after Tony's last appearance here that DiUbaldo would meet Moore on the next card arranged.

These two boys' put on two slambang battles when the Cumberland Boys' Club was promoting amateur cards in Cumberland. Each won once, and the Shamrock officials have high hopes of making the rubber match. This bout looms as a "natural" and should bring the fans out in large numbers. This bout as well as the main bout are down for five rounds.

Hillegas On Win Streak
The main bout will bring together Al Hillegas of Central City, Pa., and Delton Parker, Shamrock A. C. puncher. Hillegas is undefeated in his last 21 starts and in his last appearance here punched out a clean cut decision over Tony Lisanti, rugged South End slugger. And since that fight many fans have argued that he can also whip Parker. It was with this dispute in mind that the matchmaker closed the deal.

Parker, the lad who takes pleasure in beating all of the amateur champs the promoters bring in for him, will be out fresh from a victory over Ralph Immel who holds an assortment of titles in Pennsylvania. Parker incidentally repeated his victory over Immel scored in Cumberland on the Shamrock Club's last card, by punching out a clean cut decision over Immel in Berkeley Springs the other night. Delton says he thinks he can do something to stop Hillegas' winning streak.

All-Star Eastern Grid Team Meets Giants Tonight
New York, Sept. 6. (P)—The New York Giants, champions of the national football league and victors 9-0 over an all-star team at Chicago last week, face the pick of the 1938 eastern college players at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night.

The Giants, victorious in the three previous games sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune's fresh air fund, are favored to turn back the combination assembled by Jock Sutherland, but by no great margin. While the pros have the advantage of experience and of having played together for several years, Sutherland will throw against them at the start nine men who played under him at Pittsburgh last season.

Supporting Pitt's all-star army will be Don Campbell, Carnegie Tech tackle, and Sid Luckman, one of the greatest backs ever turned out at Columbia. Luckman will team with the Panthers' trio of John Chickerno, Harold Stebbins and Marshall Goldberg, All-America fullback.

Sutherland has in reserve such famous players as Bill Osanski of Holy Cross, star of the Chicago game; Brud Holland, Cornell's All-America end; Bob MacLeod, one of Dartmouth's greats and Wilmet Sidat-Singh, pass flinger from Syracuse.

The Giants will be at full strength. Hank Scar has recovered from injuries and is listed to start in the backfield with Ed Danowski, the league's leading passer; Ward Cuff, who kicked one of the three field goals that won the Chicago battle, and Leland Shaffer.

Detroit Blanks Cleveland 2-0 As York Homers

Circuit Clout Ruins Milnar's Fine Pitching Effort

Cleveland, Sept. 6. (P)—Al Milnar held Detroit to five hits in a south-paw pitching duel today, but one of them was Rudy York's 14th homer with Charles Gehring on base and the Tigers beat Cleveland, 2 to 0, to go into a virtual fourth-place tie with the Indians.

Except in the seventh, Archie McKain kept Cleveland's nine hits scattered to no more than one each inning. Rollie Hemleky and Lou Boudreau singled in the seventh and Bruce Campbell walked, filling the bases with one out, but Ben Chapman grounded into a double play.

Dorothy Traung Nears Repeat in Mason-Dixon Open

Defending Champ in Blazing Golf Turn-Around at White Sulphur

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 6. (P)—Defending Champion Dorothy Traung hit the home nine in a blazing golf turn-about today to step nearer a repeat title in the Mason and Dixon women's tournament.

Dropping the first two holes of her match, the San Franciscan came up even with 41 at the turn and then played home in par 37 to win 3 and 2 from Mrs. J. H. Heim of Kane, Pa., on the 16th hole.

Runner-up Also Wins
Mrs. Betty Meckley, who qualified one stroke behind the defending titlist with an 82, won decisively 5 and 4 from Mrs. Linton Fallis of Toledo, O., turning in a two over par 76 for the lowest round of the tournament to date.

The Ohioan, champion in her home state, battled on even terms for four holes but dropped far back after the Washington golfer gained control of her putting.

Co-medalist Jean Myer of Ann Arbor, Mich., former Michigan state titlist, marked up a 7-6 victory over Virginia Paddock of Detroit, who had been given a chance for the decision.

The Michigan player reached the turn with one over par 38, four up on her opponent, and then clinched the match by shooting par, a birdie and par again on the next three holes.

In an upset, white-haired Mrs. D. P. Manion of Oil City, Pa., finished a 3 and 2 winner over the veteran Mrs. Leon Solomon of Memphis, whose trouble started on the first tee and held to the end.

Mrs. T. E. Schludberg of Baltimore turned in another surprise victory when she finished 3 and 2 ahead of blonde Marion Brown of Washington, shooting nine one-putt greens in the 18.

Other Scores
Mary Fine of Scranton, Pa., defeated Mrs. S. A. Israel, Jr., of New Orleans, 3 and 2.
Virginia Guilford of Syracuse, N. Y., co-medalist, won from Mrs. E. W. Sluff of Wheeling, 6 and 4.
Ann Hoblitzel, West Virginia champion, of Parkersburg, defeated Mrs. L. G. Kaye of Prospect, Ky., 3 and 2.

The little West Virginian, starting slowly, found herself down two strokes going to the eighth, but made the turn even with two over par 39. She will play the defending champion tomorrow.

SADDLE STRAP SAM FINDS "SQUIRREL" SEASON OPEN IN MIDST OF WAR ABROAD

Wednesday, Sept. 6, 1939.
Dear Celanese Kelly:
You can parlay this to Paddock Pete since once again I'm off parlaying what with "Brain-child" being my only winner in that triple-tangle I tried today.

Getting back to where I left off in my epistle to you yesterday I see by the papers that the "Celanese Plant Is Set For Munitions." It so happens that story follows a tip we heard some time ago. However, since our tips or horses usually find them being beaten by a nose, the boys here just stuck their noses in the air when it was mentioned some time back. It was a good guess right at the start of the Celanese stoppage, strike, shut-down, lock-out, walk-out or whatever it was, that may be the boys and girls would find things a little different when they went back to work at the Celanese.

I still imagine they will, what with the statement that "while conversion of the whole plant to war time use would take nearly a month, . . . part could be devoted to munitions immediately."

"Now it has been more than a month since the 'stoppage' or 'strike' etc., at the Celanese and there has been a pretty large crew of maintenance men at the plant all the time. . . . so my spy tells me . . . and there wasn't a beaker of brew on the table."

Our No A-1 spy, whom everyone knows as a golfer that never shot a hole-in-one on the Country Club course, was the informant. Like the sauce of the same name, he was quite spicy. He said some boys, working in a special lab, have to strip down to their original birthday garb, then don all leather garments before they enter this lab to do their day's chore.

I asked him if he had seen any Buck Rogers' comics lately, and on his vouching that he had not, made mental note of the all-leather uniform, figuring that maybe we could sell some horse-hides we knew would prove of more value as plain hides than coverings for the ponies we play.

To keep this strictly sports we have to break in with a sports line like that; just like little telegraph tickers "tick" between their news items.

I feel sorry for radio news announcers; they're so readily misinterpreted. But they always have an old standby, just like a newspaperman. All radio announcers write their script before reading it off, if it is not already written on the printer machines that drive broadcast patches to them. So we advise before going ga-ga about what a radio announcer is said to have said, if you don't hear him, is to read what the radio announcer really read over the radio.

Tap—diddy-lap-lap. — That's our radio break-off, again!

Having noticed Tuesday night that Adolf Hitler was said to have been under Polish fire we wonder at the new story about Adolf having been under the care of an alienist since he has been suffering from a severe mental disorder.

We figure that comes under the head of "squirrels" in sports, the squirrel season being not far off (or is it ever off?)

What Adolf has is supposed to be an incurable mental disease which causes his victims to have alternate fits of depression and elation, complicated by illusions that they are being persecuted.

"Baseball fans get the hook-up here if they recall any game in which a guy was a sucker for a curve parball pitcher. The poor fish fell for a "hook". (There are two more angles . . .)

Profit Taking Reduces Prices of Leading Stocks in Active Trading

Selling in Large Blocks Features Forenoon Session

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—Profit taking in the wake of Tuesday's wild war-bond stock market today caused leaders to hand back a portion of their spectacular gains.

Selling was heaviest in the forenoon when blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares changed hands and the ticker was four minutes behind floor transactions.

Losses, running to four points or so, were later reduced, cancelled or replaced with modest advances in many cases. There was another dip in the final hour and a further mild recovery at the close.

Dealings slowed appreciably after mid-day and transfers totaled 942,840 shares against 5,932,150 yesterday which was the largest turnover since Oct. 19, 1937.

Selected rails, oil, orders, chemicals and utilities managed to emerge with fractions to 2 points or so to their credit. Steels, motors, rubbers, aircrafts, coppers and sugars, star performers of the preceding session finished with minus signs of 1 to around 3.

Among factors contributing to the day's irregularity, brokers said, was the presidential neutrality proclamation which, it was recognized, could pare prospective war business for some manufacturers. In addition, some traders, noting that Germany, England and France have yet to clash in a big way, although war was more than three days old, began to think that maybe peace could yet be arranged even with a victory of the Nazis in Poland.

Industrial news was still to the liking of bullish forces. Last week's freight loadings, to be published Friday, were estimated to have shown a sharp increase.

Clipped fractions to five points in the Curb were Aluminum Co., Bell Aircraft, Lockheed, American Dynamite "B" and Jones & Laughlin. Electric Bond & Share and Panhandle edged up.

Actresses Take Over Direction of Nursery Scene

Bachelor Edmund Goulding may rate highly as a motion picture director, but when it comes to giving a baby a bath, then Bette Davis and Louise Fazenda will take over.

It was a crowded, cluttered day nursery set for Warner Bros. "The Old Maid," which is now at the Liberty Theater. The nursery was a made over stable, circa Philadelphia in 1860. The "bath tub" was a large horse trough.

"Now in this scene I'd like Miss Davis to come out of the pitch wing, carrying three or four big apples. Miss Fazenda is bathing the little girl in the trough. Hey, props. Is the water warm enough? Okay. Miss Davis comes out and hands one of the apples to the little boy who is washing the other little boy's hair, and then she hands an apple to the little girl." Briskly and tersely Goulding lined up his scene.

Bette Davis stood silently, a slight frown of doubt on her face. Louise Fazenda rolled up a sleeve and capably jammed her arms down into the water. She frowned, too.

"All right, let's rehearse it," called Goulding cheerily. "Wait just a minute, Eddie," said Bette. "No woman, particularly a mother, would hand an apple to a child who had hands covered with soap. Nor to a baby having a bath."

"And say," sang out Louise Fazenda. "This water is hotter than gee whizz. I wouldn't put my little boy in it, I know. And I'm certainly not going to dunk that little girl."

Goulding, ever the diplomat, stroked his chin, deep in thought. He'd have to re-plot his scene. Props, without waiting for orders, already had begun dumping cold water in the steaming trough. Suddenly Goulding snapped his fingers. He made know his decision. Truly a Solomon.

"I'll tell you what we'll do, girls," he announced, placatingly. "We'll just ad lib the action on this one. You, Miss Davis, come out with the apples in your arms, but do whatever you want with them. Anything that comes natural. And you, Louise, just go ahead and give the little girl a bath like she was your own in your nursery at home. All right, let's try it again."

"I'll tell you what we'll do, girls," he announced, placatingly. "We'll just ad lib the action on this one. You, Miss Davis, come out with the apples in your arms, but do whatever you want with them. Anything that comes natural. And you, Louise, just go ahead and give the little girl a bath like she was your own in your nursery at home. All right, let's try it again."

Goulding, ever the diplomat, stroked his chin, deep in thought. He'd have to re-plot his scene. Props, without waiting for orders, already had begun dumping cold water in the steaming trough. Suddenly Goulding snapped his fingers. He made know his decision. Truly a Solomon.

"THE WOMEN" OPENS TODAY

Three Stars Top Outstanding Cast Of "The Women"

Heralded as one of the most unusual films ever to come out of Hollywood, "The Women," with an all-star cast of 135 actresses headed by Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell, opens at the Maryland Theatre today.

The story, based upon Clare Boothe's Broadway stage success of the same name, weaves the everyday experiences of women into an exciting comedy-drama into which laughs and tears are skillfully blended. Ultra-modern setting, smart clothes and a fashion parade add eye-filling beauty as a background to the razor-sharp dialogue.

Miss Shearer appears as Mary Haines, her first modern role since "Riptide." Joan Crawford is seen as the siren Crystal Allen, and Rosalind Russell as the inveterate gossip, Sylvia Fowler.

Others in a powerful supporting cast include Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson, Esther Dale, Ann Morris, Ruth Hussey, Dennis Moore, Mary Cecil, Mary Beth Hughes, Virginia Grey, Marjorie Main, Cora Witherspoon and Hedda Hopper.

The story centers about Norma Shearer as a woman whose happiness and home are temporarily wrecked by gossip, and her fight to regain the life that had been snatched from her. The picture was directed by George Cukor and brought to the screen by Hunt Stromberg.

Swingy Hit Presents Case For Hot Music

"Some Like It Hot!" That expression, used colloquially by millions of people for many years, now applies to a swingy, romantic comedy, and Paramount's "Some Like It Hot," starring Bob Hope, Shirley Ross and Gene Krupa, is now at the Garden Theatre.

After one look at this picture the partiality of that expression will be dispensed with, exchanged for the unanimity of "all like it Hot." For the picture is one of those "naturals," designed to appeal to both lovers and non-imbibers of swing.

In fact, everything about the picture is "hot." The players, the story, the direction, the music are all "in the groove," as they say in the language of swing. The story concerns the efforts of Bob, cast as a fast-talking promoter, to put his act and an orchestra in the

Production Boost To Follow Steel Experts Predict

But Coal Men Deny Possibility of Runaway Boom Market

By MAX FULLERTON
Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 6 (AP)—Coal undoubtedly will follow steel into increased output because of the European war but a runaway boom market is extremely doubtful, a dozen coal sources declared today.

Operators of West Virginia, biggest bituminous producer of the nation, watched closely reports of stimulated steel exports and some made predictions the state will find markets dropped by belligerent nations.

Since the end of the Appalachian shutdown in May, coal production here has kept pace with the heavy goods industries, with 3,988,821 tons in June, 9,599,161 tons in July and a probable August total of around 9,700,000 tons.

All sources agreed that an upward trend can be expected, any time within the next 30 to 90 days, but Jesse V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association, said official records of the industry fail to justify any predictions of a runaway market, either in production or prices.

Basing his statement on figures compiled during the World War period, Sullivan said there is little reason for any broad expansion of facilities, which are far from capacity operation, nor is there any great probability of abnormal profits.

"Wartime snowbirds, in my opinion," he said, "will have a hard winter if they attempt to nest in the competitive Appalachian area."

"Snowbirds" was the term given small operations which sprang up during and after the World War.

Indicative of the intensity with which operators are watching the market, was the statement of I. Eversole Gaines, president of the New River company, one of Southern West Virginia's largest producers.

"Inquiries about export are already being received and we have had some reports of sale."

Gaines said the reported sales concerned shipment to South America, a former French-British-German market.

The New River president joined Sullivan and others in the expressed opinion that there will not be much price rise other than "the regular seasonal pickup."

W. F. Miller, treasurer of the Amherst Fuel Company of Charleston, in forecasting an upward trend said, "the district down here will get its share." The effect of the European war, he added, should be apparent in "three or four months."

One Charleston operator said he was attempting to determine whether neutrality embargoes would have any effect on exports.

Council Urged To Remove Wall Lonaconing Resident Asks That New Section Be Torn Out

Mrs. Isabel Nightengale appeared before the council and asked that a section of the new wall on Gill's Hill be removed. She claimed the wall closes a street opening on which she owns a corner lot. The council voted to take the matter up with the WPA and also ask the Potomac Edison to remove a pole which has been placed in the middle of the intersection.

Bids were received for the installation of a new heating plant in the city building. The present system of heating is held as inadequate and dangerous. It was recalled that a prisoner held in the jail room last winter, set fire to the room, by reaching through the cell bars and lighting paper at a gas stove. The lowest bid was submitted by Alex Gardner, local plumber and the contract awarded to him.

Increased Coal Output Anticipated Due to War in Europe

Production Boost To Follow Steel Experts Predict

By MAX FULLERTON
Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 6 (AP)—Coal undoubtedly will follow steel into increased output because of the European war but a runaway boom market is extremely doubtful, a dozen coal sources declared today.

Operators of West Virginia, biggest bituminous producer of the nation, watched closely reports of stimulated steel exports and some made predictions the state will find markets dropped by belligerent nations.

Since the end of the Appalachian shutdown in May, coal production here has kept pace with the heavy goods industries, with 9,398,821 tons in June, 9,599,161 tons in July and a probable August total of around 9,700,000 tons.

All sources agreed that an upward trend can be expected, any time within the next 30 to 90 days, but Jesse V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association, said official records of the industry fail to justify any predictions of a runaway market, either in production or prices.

Basing his statement on figures compiled during the World War period, Sullivan said there is little reason for any broad expansion of facilities, which are far from capacity operation, nor is there any great probability of abnormal profits.

"War-time snowbirds, in my opinion," he said, "will have a hard winter if they attempt to nest in the competitive Appalachian area."

"Snowbirds" was the term given small operations which sprang up during and after the World War.

Indicative of the intensity with which operators are watching the market, was the statement of I. Ebersole Gaines, president of the New River company, one of Southern West Virginia's largest producers.

"Inquiries about export are already being received and we have had some reports of sale."

Gaines said the reported sales concerned shipment to South America, a former French-British-German market.

The New River president joined Sullivan and others in the expressed opinion that there will not be much price rise other than "the regular seasonal pickup."

W. F. Miller, treasurer of the American Fuel Company of Charleston, in forecasting an upward trend said, "the district down here will get its share." The effect of the European war, he added, should be apparent in "three or four months."

One Charleston operator said he was attempting to determine whether neutrality embargoes would have any effect on exports.

16,000, Minus Gas Masks, March to Class Today

Police Chief Orders Extra Precautions

Traffic Only Danger As County's Children Go 'Back to Work'

Sixteen thousand school children, minus gas masks, are returning to Allegheny county schools this morning to either start or resume their grapple with things educational.

Early this morning thousands of alarm clocks buzzed throughout the county in city homes, village dwellings and rural farmhouses, spelling the end of a long vacation.

Many children eager to return to school jumped out of bed to scrub behind ears and don brand new duds.

"You'll Be Late"

Others, less full of zeal, dozed sleepily and then snoozed on until wide-awake mothers shook their shoulders and sang the old refrain, "Dick, you'll be late for school."

And after dressing, thousands of children, their faces shining after washing, sat down to breakfast tables and ate vast quantities of cereal, eggs, and bacon. No meager war-time rations were served up to these healthy children.

All Is Peaceful

An hour later, shiny new busses started their jaunt down winding country roads pausing at every house to pick up more passengers. In villages and cities tanned youngsters shot out of homes and started forth for another joust with such problems as "if John had three apples."

But in every case, whether in the city or the country, thousands of mothers stood on their front porches waving goodbye to their children. And they were glad that the September sky was clear of aircraft and that their children would not be "evacuated" to some remote point before the day was done.

500 Teachers on the Job

Five hundred teachers will greet Allegheny county's 16,000 school children today, Superintendent Charles L. Kopp announced yesterday.

Many of the students will return to new and improved schools. Meanwhile, Allegheny county's crack schoolboy patrols will swing into action to protect the school children. In the more densely populated centers, police officers today are being warned by their chiefs that no pains must be spared in protecting the children.

Police Chief's Statement

In Cumberland, Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman issued a statement to his officers at police headquarters. The notice issued by Chief Eyerman reads:

"With the reopening of the schools for the fall term, great numbers of children will appear on the city streets at regular intervals during the day, namely: early morning, at noon and in the late afternoon, when the children are released for the day.

"The vigilance of officers of this department" should not cease at any time, however, at the above-stated times during the day, each officer will especially be on the alert in safeguarding the children of the city, whether in groups of two or twenty, at all times during the day.

"The reopening of our schools will bring a problem with which we have not had to cope during the summer vacation, and that is the appearance of groups of school children at street crossings and intersections. All officers, and particularly traffic officers, will be watchful at these points, so that none of these children are injured while crossing the streets.

"During the past summer, no serious accidents were reported to children while abroad in the streets, due to no small extent to the watchfulness of officers of this department. Don't let your record be marred during the coming school term."

Short Sessions Today

Although schools open today at 9 a. m., things won't begin to hum in earnest until Monday, Superintendent Kopp stated yesterday. Today and Friday will be half-day sessions.

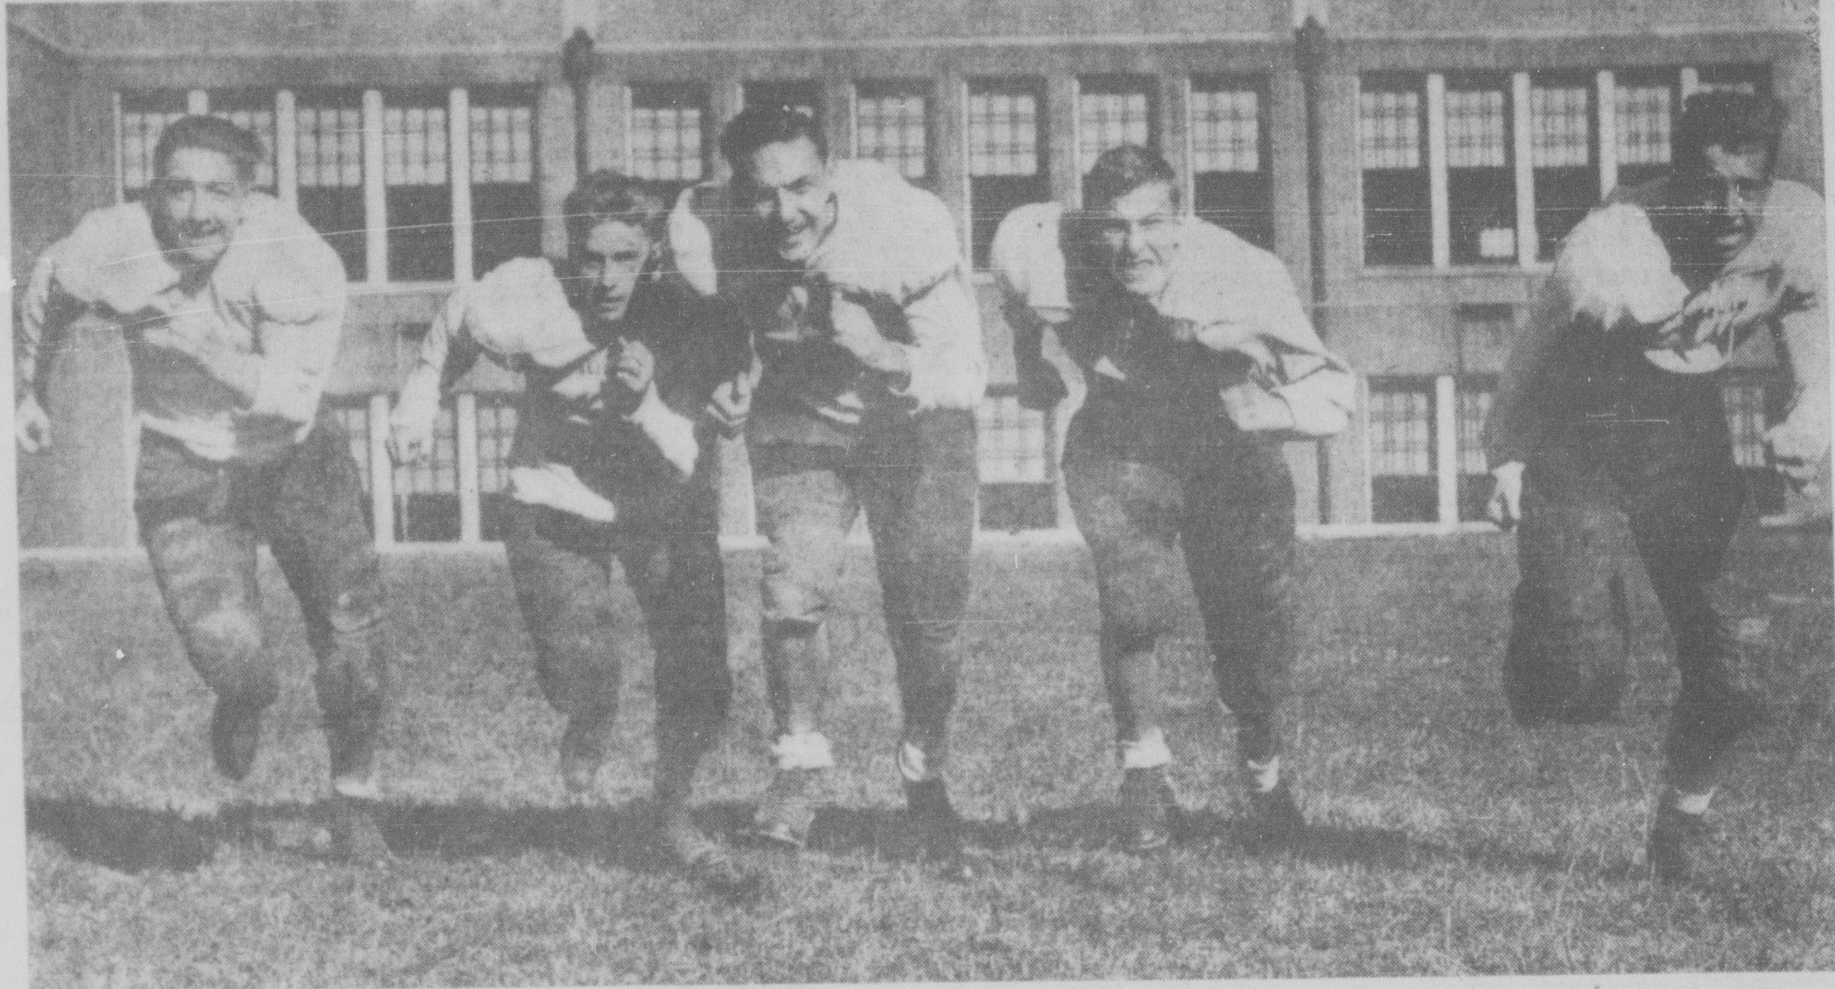

However, Superintendent Kopp stressed the fact that it is most important that all students attend the two half-day sessions in order to start the school year smoothly. Children entering school this fall for the first time must present a birth certificate and must be vaccinated.

Parochial schools of Allegheny county also start their fall term this morning. LaSalle High will have registration today and tomorrow and will start classes Monday.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Henry, 1003 Harding avenue, announce the birth of a son last night at Allegheny hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson, of Crellin, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

No Sugar in Cumberland! Red Cross Leaves Jittery Buyers Blamed

In peaceful Cumberland, many housewives sought in vain to buy sugar. Food distributors said last night that the housewives themselves were to blame for the shortage—and for the rising prices which are accompanying it.

They explained that housewives, fearful of a shortage in the wake of war in Europe, had "raided" retail stores. Instead of buying sugar in two-pound and five-pound lots, jittery housewives ordered it in 100-pound lots.

More Sugar Today

Retailers frantically sought more sugar from wholesale houses. With inventories already low on account of late summer canning and preserving activities, the wholesalers soon found their stocks depleted.

More sugar is due in today—in carload lots—but officials of both the J. C. Orrick Company and the Kenneweg Company predicted that it wouldn't last the day.

There's plenty of sugar in the United States, they said, but it's difficult to get at the moment. In addition, it's impossible under the circumstances to quote prices in advance, they declared.

Stocks Rationed Out

Several stores have had no sugar for several days. Others began this week to limit the amount sold to a customer.

The price has already jumped more than a cent a pound and is expected to go even higher before the population of Cumberland—and the rest of the country—settles down to "normalcy."

When consumers return to normalcy, so will prices, one distributor pointed out.

Soup Beans Scarce

The shortage—in fact, the almost complete lack—of sugar has been the most spectacular phase of the effect of the war on foodstuffs here, but by no means the only one.

Other commodities are also being heavily bought by Cumberlanders, remembering shortages and soaring prices during the first World War.

Flour, beans, lard, meats, and various canned goods are also having brisk sales here—and prices are jumping in response.

Meat Prices Jump

Perhaps the greatest rise in the meat line was shown by pork loins and chops. Here the rise was ten cents a pound. Beef shot upward, increases running as high as five cents. Increases in the price of ham ranged from two to four cents.

Flour was up two cents on a 24-pound bag and still climbing. Beans—navy or soup—showed increases of from one to two cents.

Lard forged ahead about three cents.

Fear Causes Shortage

The picture yesterday was prices advancing on all fronts as far as staples are concerned, with prospects of continuation until the populace forgets its fears.

"There's no reason at present for the people to hoard these supplies," one distributor said last night. "There's no shortage in the United States, and if we stay out of the war, there's no reason why people should buy so frantically."

"Unduly Excited" Another distributor said people had become "unduly excited."

The consensus seemed to be, however, that in many instances, prices will remain somewhat ahead of the pre-war period. Distributors explained that prices have been unduly low for some time, and some increase would be healthy.

Sugar, for example, has been sold with a very small margin of profit.

Red Cross Leaves Community Chest

Will Conduct Own Roll Call Drive

The local Red Cross organization is withdrawing from the Community Chest in accordance with an agreement reached some time ago, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. George Henderson, chairman of the Cumberland Chapter of the American Red Cross, and Harold W. Smith, president of the Community Chest.

The Red Cross will hold a roll call membership in November, beginning on Armistice Day and ending on Thanksgiving Day, the same dates set for the national roll call.

Is National Policy Mrs. Henderson explained, "It is the policy of the National Board of Directors of the Red Cross to encourage local chapters to function entirely as independent organizations and for this reason the Cumberland Chapter is severing its connection with the Community Chest, expressing at the same time its deep appreciation of the services rendered by the Chest."

Mrs. Henderson said that the local chapter, in accordance with instructions from National Headquarters, is prepared to render emergency aid to United States citizens returning from Europe.

Children's Clothes Needed Mrs. Henderson also issued an appeal for children's clothing in good condition, shoes of any size, materials suitable for children's clothing and odds and ends of knitting wool. Clothing must be clean, but garments which can be mended or cut down to children's sizes will be gratefully received. Clothing may be delivered at the Red Cross office in the Public Safety Building, or donations will be called for if telephone notice is given. The office number is 2002-W.

William Robert Odgers William Robert Odgers, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Odgers, died yesterday morning at his home on Eastman road, RFD 3. He had been ill for several weeks.

Surviving, besides his parents, are a sister and three brothers. Burial will be at Three Churches, W. Va.

Henry Fresh Henry Fresh, a former resident of Cumberland and Frostburg, died yesterday morning at his home in East Orange, N. Y. He was 72.

Mr. Fresh was born in Lonaconing, a son of the late Jacob and Hannah Fresh. He was associated with the former Maryland Shoe Company here for many years and was later employed at the Celanese plant before moving to East Orange eight years ago.

Surviving, besides his wife, Mrs. Lillie Gunneth Fresh, are five daughters, Mrs. Earl Enlow, Mrs. Robert Helman, Mrs. Theodore Mellett, Miss Elizabeth Fresh, and Mrs. George Eppley, all of East Orange; four sons, H. Lester Fresh, of Pittsburgh; P. Lee Fresh, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; and Robert and Harold Fresh, both of East Orange; and four brothers, Jacob Fresh, of Frostburg; Albert Fresh, of Houston, Tex.; William Fresh, of New York City; and Asa G. Fresh, of New Germany, Md.

After services in New York City Friday, the body will be taken to Frostburg for the funeral and burial Saturday.

Abraham B. Hoover Abraham Bloom Hoover, of 202 Maple street, Mapleside, died suddenly Tuesday afternoon after being stricken with a heart attack as he walked to his home from a bus. He was 66.

Mr. Hoover was born in Clearfield county, Pennsylvania, a son of the late William and Elizabeth McKee Hoover. He was a brick setter employed by the Pen Mar Brick and Tile Company.

He was a member of the Improved Order of Red Men.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marion Lancaster Hoover; a daughter, Miss Elizabeth May Hoover; a son, Shannon Hoover; a sister, Mrs. Clara Kems; a brother, Ethan A. Hoover; and three grandchildren.

Motorist Fined $5 Manning H. Williams, News city editor, was fined $5 by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce in Police court yesterday on careless driving charges. He was the only alleged offender in court yesterday.

Election in Parsons Parsons, V. Va., Sept. 6. (P)—One Parsons succeeded another Parsons, so Parsons still has a Parsons as head of its municipal government.

Jared G. Parsons resigned as mayor due to the press of personal business at a special council meeting last night. The council immediately elected James Parsons to succeed him.

Postmaster Shriver Building New Home

A permit to build a $7,500 home on Fairmont lane yesterday was granted to Postmaster James C. Shriver, 417 Washington street, by City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer.

According to the plans drawn by Architect George P. Sansbury, Mr. Shriver will build a two-story frame dwelling, thirty-eight feet by twenty-six feet, with a concrete block foundation and rubberized shingle roof.

Romeo Gets Date—With Shotgun

Bedford Visitor Ends Holiday in Jail

Adolf Hitler tried to arrange a little "date" with Neighbor Poland and found himself starting into the cannon mounds of a World war.

The same sort of thing happened to a Bedford man who was having a little Labor Day fun down Cumberland way.

According to testimony in Trial Magistrates court, the man from Bedford demanded admittance to Stanley L. Donahue's roadside on Route 4 after closing hours.

The Bedford man was rebuffed, but still undaunted. So, according to the testimony, he up and asked Mrs. Donahue for a date.

Next thing he knew, he was looking down the barrel of Husband Donahue's trusty shotgun.

The shotgun continued to stare him in the face until State Trooper B. C. Mason arrived, and took the Bedford man to jail on a charge of disturbing the public peace.

In Trial Magistrates court, Magistrate Frank A. Perdue sentenced the Bedford man to round out his holiday with ten days in the county jail.

LaVale Man Jailed On Girl's Charges

A 25-year-old LaVale man was held in the county jail today without bail on a charge of rape perpetrated by an 18-year-old Cumberland girl.

The man, Robert Spaulding, waived a preliminary hearing yesterday, and Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. ordered him jailed pending grand jury action.

Spaulding was arrested by State Police Sgt. James T. Knight and State Trooper Austin H. Bickle after the girl told them he had attacked her in a car near Midland Monday night.

286 Students in County Will Draw U. S. Wages while Attending School

A seventy-five per cent increase in the National Youth Administration's allotment to provide part time work for students in fourteen Allegheny county schools was announced yesterday.

The allotment for the current term is $15,444, an increase of $6,605 over last year's quota.

This will permit 286 needy students to earn from $3 to $6 a month while attending school. Jobs for the students are provided by school authorities.

To be eligible for the federal payroll, students must be between the ages of 16 and 24 inclusive, and must maintain satisfactory scholastic records. Their need for assistance is determined by school and college officials who are supposed to investigate each case and select the most needy applicants.

The work these students on federal payrolls are supposed to do is that which would not ordinarily be done by the regularly hired school personnel.

NYA headquarters also announced a check-up for the fiscal year ended June 30 that 289 youths were employed during June on NYA work projects, and that their monthly earnings were $4,687, or an average of more than $16 monthly.

These work projects are for youths aged 18 to 24 who are out of school and unemployed. During the past fiscal year, the federal government has paid out $56,250 to such workers in Allegheny county, plus additional amounts for materials and supplies.

Federal funds are also available so that needy college students can earn from $10 to $20 a month and graduate students from $20 to $30 a month.

Byron Announces Academy Exams

Three Annapolis Appointments Open

Western Maryland youths desiring to enter the Naval Academy at Annapolis or the Military Academy at West Point will be called for a competitive examination Oct. 7, Congressman William D. Byron announced yesterday.

Congressman Byron has three appointments to make to the Naval Academy and one to the Military Academy from this congressional district. One principal and three alternates will be named for each of the Annapolis appointments and one principal and two alternates for the West Point appointment.

Age limits for Annapolis are 16 to 20; for West Point, 17 up to the 22nd birthday.

All interested in taking the examination are expected to write Rep. Byron at the House Office Building, in Washington, by Sept. 13.

Rep. Byron said that because there were so many requests for appointments, "the only fair way to distribute these appointments would be through a competitive examination, to be given by the U. S. Civil Service Commission."

One of them was the solemn protest the government of Holland is supposed to have sent to London and to Berlin protesting that countless English propaganda "bombs" landed on good Dutch soil instead of in Naziland.

Another light touch was the announcement from Geneva that due to events "the work of the League of Nations has been interrupted." But there is tragedy, too, in that message.

International relations note: The British government undoubtedly would be interested to know that Anglo-American relations have improved.

Local 1874, TWU, after expressing sympathy toward British institutions, has suddenly shown marked respect for British law.

Speakers at union mass meetings, as well as union publications, constantly flayed the Celanese Corporation as a British outfit during what the union called the "stoppage of work" at the plant.

At the final compensation hearing in Baltimore the other day, union attorneys quoted an almost countless number of British court decisions to uphold their contention that Celanese workers are entitled to jobless benefits.

Company Attorney John W. Avirett II injected one of the few instances of humor into the argument when he smilingly quoted Union Attorney Isadore Katz rejoined.

"That just goes to show we have nothing against the British," Union Attorney Isadore Katz rejoined.

At another point, Avirett said that to call the situation a "stoppage of work" rather than a "strike" was like calling the international situation a "stoppage of peace" rather than a "war."

We're not accusing Mr. Avirett of plagiarism, but for the record, we might point out that a similar crack appeared in this column several days ago.

Halls Off, Girls to A Marvelous New Law Rio De Janeiro, Sept. 6. (P)—Theatrical performances in Rio cannot start until all the ladies in the audience take off those hats, by a new regulation. Only one woman, who didn't want to disturb her hairdo, made trouble for the authorities when the regulation was inaugurated. So far it has not been made to apply to movie houses.

Plant To Reopen Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 6. (P)—Treasurer A. J. Rolland of the Adamston Flat Glass Company announced the plant would resume operations Sept. 21, employing about 300 men. The plant has been closed for three months for extensive repairs.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Dan Burke, of the Liberty theater, complains that we were very unkind to him. Hollywood, and honorable box office by saying in a News story that "The Old Maid" is a sad picture.

Movie Man Burke says it has some sad parts, but also some comedy parts. Therefore, it is not a sad picture.

Which leaves us as much at variance with Manager Burke as the news stories from Paris differ from the news stories from Berlin.

We would like to point out, however, that an advertisement on the front of Mr. Burke's emporium quotes the New York Daily Mirror's movie reviewer as saying:

"Lusty men joined the ladies yesterday in enjoying a good cry over it."

Now we are not certain just what it takes to make lusty men cry in New York, but it seems to us that their tears are pretty good evidence that the picture was plenty sad.

We don't know how lusty Cumberland men bore up under the picture, but we saw numerous Cumberland women dabbing at their eyes when they came out.

Furthermore, we don't see why advertiser Burke objects to having it noised about that his picture is sad. People won't stay away just because it is sad, even in these sad times. A lot of people really like to have their emotions moved, which is something many dull pictures can't do.

Movie people, we suppose, would rather call it "intense," or perhaps "gripping," but when people (and lusty men) cry about it, we still think it is just plain "sad."

Mr. Burke's argument is all wet, but maybe that's because he has been crying so much himself.

If, however, we have said anything unkind about the picture, all this free advertising should make up for it, don't you think, Mr. Burke?

If Mr. Burke's method of reasoning is correct, then the war in Europe isn't sad either, because the war has had its humorous side-lights, too.

One of them was the solemn protest the government of Holland is supposed to have sent to London and to Berlin protesting that countless English propaganda "bombs" landed on good Dutch soil instead of in Naziland.

Another light touch was the announcement from Geneva that due to events "the work of the League of Nations has been interrupted." But there is tragedy, too, in that message.

International relations note: The British government undoubtedly would be interested to know that Anglo-American relations have improved.

Local 1874, TWU, after expressing sympathy toward British institutions, has suddenly shown marked respect for British law.

Speakers at union mass meetings, as well as union publications, constantly flayed the Celanese Corporation as a British outfit during what the union called the "stoppage of work" at the plant.

At the final compensation hearing in Baltimore the other day, union attorneys quoted an almost countless number of British court decisions to uphold their contention that Celanese workers are entitled to jobless benefits.

Company Attorney John W. Avirett II injected one of the few instances of humor into the argument when he smilingly quoted Union Attorney Isadore Katz rejoined.

"That just goes to show we have nothing against the British," Union Attorney Isadore Katz rejoined.

At another point, Avirett said that to call the situation a "stoppage of work" rather than a "strike" was like calling the international situation a "stoppage of peace" rather than a "war."

We're not accusing Mr. Avirett of plagiarism, but for the record, we might point out that a similar crack appeared in this column several days ago.

Squirrel Hunt Ends in Jail

Game Warden Minke Nabs Two Gunners

Crisp September weather called out two Georges Creek hunters early yesterday, but Deputy Game Warden Joseph Minke crossed the path, and they went to the county jail.

In the jail Earl Bland, of Lonaconing, and William Meyers, of McConow, will remain for twenty-six days.

They were arrested on Port Hill near Rawlins, about 6:30 a. m. yesterday by Game Warden Minke, who charged they were "attempting" to shoot squirrels out of a tree.

They had not been successful in their quest at the time he nabbed them, he said. Last night, Cresaptown, Magistrate Roy Bowman found them both guilty and imposed a fine of $25 and costs each of them. They were sentenced to the county jail for 26 days default.

Teachers Elect Same Officers

Gilbert Cooling Heads Association

The Allegheny County Teachers Association yesterday elected officers, listened to suggestions from prominent educators, and otherwise made preparations for the opening of the 1939-40 school year.

The association, meeting at the Hill high school, reelected all officers. They included Gilbert Cooling of Barton, president; H. C. Gregg of Port Hill high school, vice-president; Miss Althea Fuller, of the Royal school, secretary; Miss S. Higgins, of Columbia Street school, assistant secretary; and James S. of Port Hill, treasurer.

The teachers heard address by Dr. Edgar Long, professor of education at the University of Maryland, and Dr. I. Jewell Simpson, assistant superintendent of schools.

Long discussed the teacher's opportunity for service to the individual student, while Dr. Simpson spoke on new trends in the curriculum. County Superintendent Charles Kopp presided.

In the afternoon the teachers gathered in study groups for discussions led by county superintendent.

Hitch-Hiked to Illinois, Returned in Stolen Car, Federal Officers Charge

The wanderings of a 28-year-old Midland man who hitch-hiked the Middle West and returned this section in an allegedly stolen car were at an end today—temporarily at least.

Robert Beveridge McKinley, who quit a WPA job to make the "road" junket, was committed to county jail in default of $1,000 bail after being given a hearing yesterday before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett.

McKinley was arrested after charges of violating the Dyer anti-lynching law, and after a near accident, in Garrett county, by State Police Corporal Tom Currie on a minor charge, for which he received a ten-day jail sentence. Meanwhile, an investigation of federal officers revealed that the car he was driving had been stolen in Tuscola, Ill.

Returning to this section, he, however, failed to rejoin his wife and four children at Midland, Md., instead, in Garrett county, McKinley admitted having served a term in the Maryland State School when a youth and having served three years in House of Correction on a burglary charge.

Unable To Remember Beating His Wife A Franklin resident, who said "didn't remember" beating his wife, was given a suspended sentence of six months in the Maryland House of Correction in Trial Magistrate court on an assault charge.

Earl Miller was accused by wife, Nellie, of beating her on Oct. 2 while he was intoxicated. "I don't remember anything about beating my wife," Miller told Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce to his surprise.

Miller was then given the suspended sentence on condition he refrain from liquor.

Old Fashion Festival On Tap Tonight Time marches on, but the old-fashioned church festival packs 'em in—and fills 'em.

Such a festival takes place tonight at the Mt. Pleasant Methodist church group, which are located four miles east of the city and a half mile off the Baltimore pike.

Homemade ice cream, apple, sandwiches, and sweet will be served, beginning 7 p. m.

Such is life in free America. Europe tries to destroy itself.

16,000, Minus Gas Masks, March to Class Today

Police Chief Orders Extra Precautions

Traffic Only Danger As County's Children Go 'Back to Work'

Sixteen thousand school children, minus gas masks, are returning to Allegheny county schools this morning to either start or resume their grapple with things educational.

Early this morning thousands of alarm clocks buzzed throughout the county in city homes, village dwellings and rural farmhouses, spelling the end of a long vacation.

Many children eager to return to school jumped out of bed to scrub behind ears and don brand new duds.

"You'll Be Late"

Others, less full of zeal, snuggled sleepily and then snoozed on until wide-awake mothers shook their shoulders and sang the old refrain, "Dick, you'll be late for school."

And after dressing, thousands of children, their faces shining after washing, sat down to breakfast tables and ate vast quantities of cereal, eggs, and bacon. No meager war-time rations were served up to these healthy children.

All Is Peaceful

An hour later, shiny new busses started their jaunt down winding country roads pausing at every house to pick up more passengers. In villages and cities tanned youngsters shot out of homes and started forth for another joust with such problems as "If John had three apples."

But in every case, whether in the city or the country, thousands of mothers stood on their front porches waving goodbye to their children. And they were glad that the September sky was clear of aircraft and that their children would not be "evacuated" to some remote point before the day was done.

500 Teachers on the Job

Five hundred teachers will greet Allegheny county's 16,000 school children today, Superintendent Charles L. Kopp announced yesterday.

Many of the students will return to new and improved schools.

Meanwhile, Allegheny county's crack schoolboy patrols will swing into action to protect the school children. In the more densely populated centers, police officers today are being warned by their chiefs that no pains must be spared in protecting the children.

Police Chief's Statement

In Cumberland, Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman issued a statement to his officers at police headquarters. The notice issued by Chief Eyerman reads:

"With the reopening of the schools for the fall term, great numbers of children will appear on the city streets at regular intervals during the day, namely: early morning, at noon and in the late afternoon, when the children are released for the day.

"The vigilance of officers of this department" should not cease at any time, however, at the above-stated times during the day, each officer will especially be on the alert in safeguarding the children of the city, whether in groups of two or twenty, at all times during the day.

"The reopening of our schools will bring a problem with which we have not had to cope during the summer vacation, and that is the appearance of groups of school children at street crossings and intersections. All officers, and particularly traffic officers, will be watchful at these points, so that none of these children are injured while crossing the streets.

"During the past summer, no serious accidents were reported to children while abroad in the streets due to no small extent to the watchfulness of officers of this department. Don't let your record be marred during the coming school term."

Short Sessions Today

Although schools open today at 9 a. m., things won't begin to hum in earnest until Monday, Superintendent Kopp stated yesterday. Today and Friday will be half-day sessions.

However, Superintendent Kopp stressed the fact that it is most important that all students attend the two half-day sessions in order to start the school year smoothly.

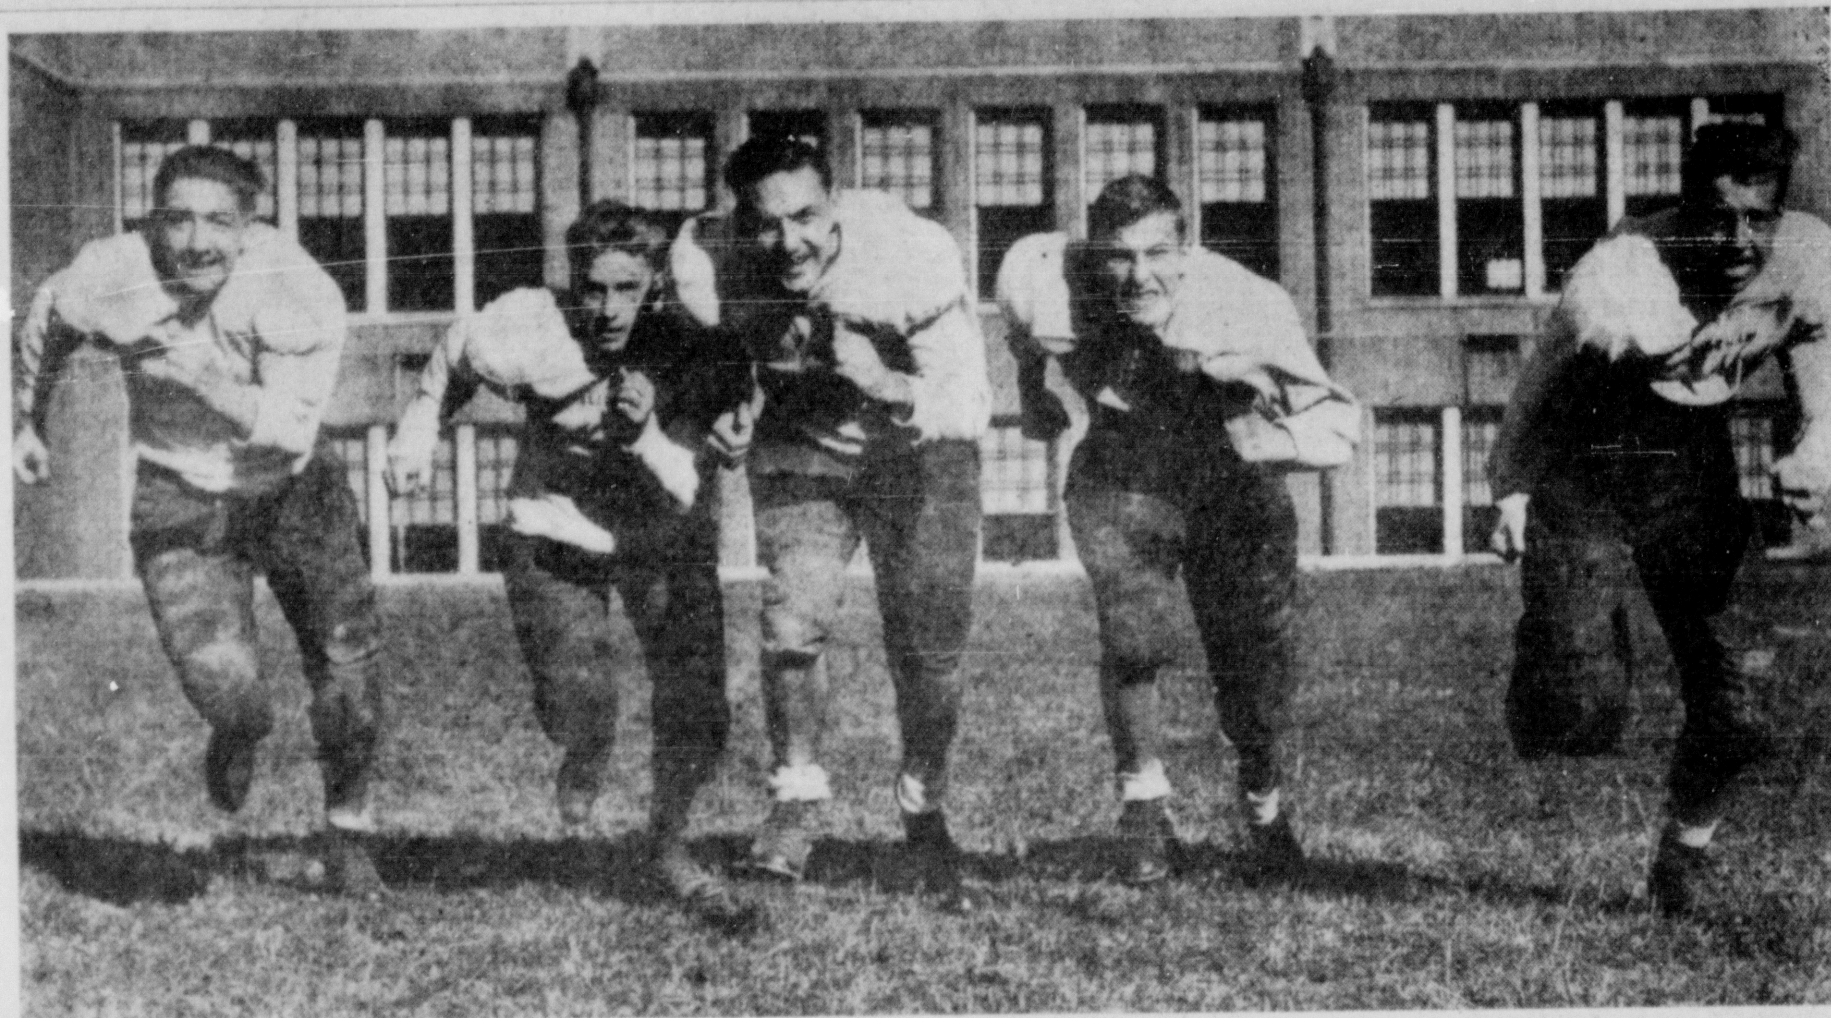

Children entering school this fall for the first time must present a birth certificate and must be vaccinated.

Parochial schools of Allegheny county also start their fall terms this morning. LaSalle High will have registration today and tomorrow and will start classes Monday.

No Sugar in Cumberland! Jittery Buyers Blamed

In Berlin today, German housewives presented their ration cards and were doled out their war allotments of sugar.

In peaceful Cumberland, many housewives sought in vain to buy sugar.

Food distributors said last night that the housewives themselves were to blame for the shortage—and for the rising prices which are accompanying it.

They explained that housewives, fearful of a shortage in the wake of war in Europe, had "raided" retail stores. Instead of buying sugar in two-pound and five-pound lots, jittery housewives ordered it in 100-pound lots.

More Sugar Today

Retailers frantically sought more sugar from wholesale houses. With inventories already low on account of late summer canning and preserving activities, the wholesalers soon found their stocks depleted.

More sugar is due in today—in carload lots—but officials of both the J. C. Orrick Company and the Kennecott Company predicted that it wouldn't last the day.

There's plenty of sugar in the United States, they said, but it's difficult to get at the moment. In addition, it's impossible under the circumstances to quote prices in advance, they declared.

Stocks Rationed Out

Several stores have had no sugar for several days. Others began this week to limit the amount sold to a customer.

The price has already jumped more than a cent a pound and is expected to go even higher before the population of Cumberland—and the rest of the country—settles down to "normalcy."

When consumers return to normalcy, so will prices, one distributor pointed out.

Soup Beans Scarce

The shortage—in fact, the almost complete lack—of sugar has been the most spectacular phase of the effect of the war on foodstuffs here, but by no means the only one.

Other commodities are also being heavily bought by Cumberlanders, remembering shortages and soaring prices during the first World War. Flour, beans, lard, meats, and various canned goods are also having brisk sales here—and prices are jumping in response.

Meat Prices Jump

Perhaps the greatest rise in the meat line was shown by pork loins and chops. Here the rise was ten cents a pound. Beef shot upward, increases running as high as five cents. Increases in the price of ham ranged from two to four cents.

Flour was up two cents on a 24-pound bag and still climbing. Beans—navy or soup—showed increases of from one to two cents.

Lard forged ahead about three cents.

Fear Causes Shortage

The picture yesterday was prices advancing on all fronts as far as staples are concerned, with prospects of continuation until the populace forgets its fears.

"There's no reason at present for the people to hoard these supplies," one distributor said last night. "There's no shortage in the United States, and if we stay out of the war, there's no reason why people should buy so frantically."

"Consumers have forced the prices up themselves."

"Unduly Excited"

Another distributor said people had become "unduly excited."

The consensus seemed to be, however, that in many instances, prices will remain somewhat ahead of the pre-war period. Distributors explained that prices have been unduly low for some time, and some increase would be healthy.

Sugar, for example, has been sold with a very small margin of profit, with a very small margin of profit, with a very small margin of profit.

Red Cross Leaves Community Chest

Will Conduct Own Roll Call Drive

The local Red Cross organization is withdrawing from the Community Chest in accordance with an agreement reached some time ago. It was announced yesterday by Mrs. George Henderson, chairman of the Cumberland Chapter of the American Red Cross, and Harold W. Smith, president of the Community Chest.

The Red Cross will hold a roll call membership in November, beginning on Armistice Day and ending on Thanksgiving Day, the same dates set for the national roll call.

Is National Policy

Mrs. Henderson explained, "It is the policy of the National Board of Directors of the Red Cross to encourage local chapters to function entirely as independent organizations and for this reason the Cumberland Chapter is severing its connection with the Community Chest, expressing at the same time its deep appreciation of the services rendered by the Chest."

Mrs. Henderson said that the local chapter, in accordance with instructions from National Headquarters, is prepared to render emergency aid to United States citizens returning from Europe.

Children's Clothes Needed

Mrs. Henderson also issued an appeal for children's clothing in good condition, shoes of any size, materials suitable for children's clothing and odds and ends of knitting wool. Clothing must be clean, but garments which can be mended or cut down to children's sizes will be gratefully received. Clothing may be delivered at the Red Cross office in the Public Safety Building, or donations will be called for if telephone notice is given. The office number is 2002-W.

Byron Announces Academy Exams

Three Annapolis Appointments Open

Western Maryland youths desiring to enter the Naval Academy at Annapolis or the Military Academy at West Point will be called for a competitive examination Oct. 7, Congressman William D. Byron announced yesterday.

Congressman Byron has three appointments to make to the Naval Academy and one to the Military Academy from this congressional district. One principal and three alternates will be named for each of the Annapolis appointments and one principal and two alternates for the West Point appointment.

Age limits for Annapolis are 16 to 20; for West Point, 17 up to the 22nd birthday.

All interested in taking the examination are expected to write Rep. Byron at the House Office Building in Washington, by Sept. 13.

Rep. Byron said that because there were so many requests for appointments, "the only fair way to distribute these appointments would be through a competitive examination, to be given by the U. S. Civil Service Commission."

"Preparations" will be the subject of Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz when he resumes his fall preaching schedule at the B'er Chayim Temple Friday at 7:30 p. m.

Services for the High Holy Days will open Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. with Rabbi Lefkowitz in charge. The schedule follows:

Wednesday, "Shonoh Tovah—But What Is Happiness?"; Thursday at 10 a. m., "Tragedy and Hope"; Friday, September 22, 7:30 p. m., "To Pray With the Transgressors"; Saturday, September 23 at 10 a. m., "Ivri Onochi—But What Is a Jew?"; children's service at 1 p. m. with sermon by Isaac Hirsch; memorial service at 3:30 p. m.

The summer over yet? No Sire! Queen City Grove No. 11, of the Woodmen Circle, hasn't held its annual picnic yet. But plans are being made for Grove Reporter Mary Linnenbroger.
